

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

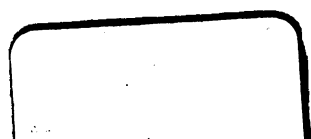

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. KITCHEN GARDEN.—Continue to sow for succession, peas, beans, turnips, carrots, lettuce, parsnips, radish, parsley, and all herbs, cauliflowers, broccoli, &c. Transplant leeks and celery. Pull up forward crops of keeping onions, and stop shoots of pumpkins, vegetable marrow, cucumbers, &c. Water plants that have lately been put out, seed beds, and young seedlings.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Nothing spoils the appearance of a garden so much as weeds and dead leaves:—These should be removed as they appear. Water should not be spared, care being taken to do so only after the sun has gone down. Trim and regulate plants. Dahlias may be planted. Stake and carefully tie up such as require it. Shade delicate plants from the scorching mid-day sun.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Bud fruit trees, roses, and choice shrubs. Carefully attend to vines, keeping them free from weeds and insects. Gather ripe fruit. Thin what is superfluous. Birds are very destructive to fruit, and should be watched where it can be done. It is well to tie up the bunches of grapes in paper or muslin bags.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Clean and hill up maize. Break up ground for barley, &c. Cut tobacco crop, which should be ready about the end of the month. Carefully go over the cotton crop, and gather all ripe pods.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Celery must be earthed up as required, and more may be planted out for a succession. Continue to sow peas, beans, beet, turnips, broccoli, &c., and plant out whatever may be left in the seed beds. Carefully attend to cucumber plants, watering well in dry weather.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Thin out dahlia buds. Plant out perennial and biennial flowering plants, such as stocks, sweet williams, &c., in cloudy days, and give them water. Keep all beds and borders free from weeds; remove all decayed bloom.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Attend to all fruit trees, removing all ripe fruit. Clear grape vines from all useless shoots and tendrils; see that all the branches are exposed to the sun and air.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Sow Cape barley and turnips. Plant potatoes. Keep maize crops clean. Cut tobacco. Gather all ripe cotton pods, taking care not to injure or break the plants.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Sow vegetables as in last month. Plant potatoes, cauliflower, broccoli, eschalots, celery, lettuce, &c. Clear and thin spinach, and earth up turnips, potatoes, celery, &c., as they seem to require it. Hoe the ground and destroy all weeds. If it was not done before, tie up your onions, choosing a dry day for the purpose; seed should also be gathered in dry weather as they ripen; such as leeks, onions, &c. Thin your seed beds.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Weeds cannot be too carefully eradicated, and water should be plentifully used in dry weather. If the ground becomes caked, as it is apt to do, loosen it with a light hoe or rake. Plant Cape bulbs. Propagate herbaceous plants. Keep flower beds and borders clean and in good order.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—In moist weather plant out strawberries. Examine fruit trees and vines. Gather all ripe fruit.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Prepare ground for wheat, oats, &c. Sow Cape barley, mangel wozzel, &c., and towards the end of the month, wheat. Gather sorghum saccharatum, if ripe, and cotton pods.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—If you have any large cabbage plants in seed beds, plant them out in rows. Plant also culinary herbs. Earth up your celery as required. Continue to sow peas, broccoli, lettuce, onions, turnips, radish, beans, cabbages. Dress all your beds, thinning out carrots, turnips, parsnips, &c.; and at your vacant time prepare new beds, trenching and manuring all unoccupied ground.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Plant different kinds of bulbs, such as tulips, &c. Flowering shrubs and herbaceous plants may be propagated and transplanted. When tender plants have to be removed, keep as much earth about the roots as possible. This is a good month for making edges round borders. Box, lavender, thyme, daisies, sea pinks, &c., make very nice edgings; but when these cannot be carried out in sufficient quantities, a good border of turf looks very well, but it must always be kept very clean and well trimmed.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Plant raspberry, gooseberry, strawberry, and currants. Gather all ripe fruit. In pruning raspberries all the old stems that produce fruit this summer must be taken out.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Sow wheat, Cape barley, and oats. The tobacco crop should be carefully watched, and cut as it becomes ripe.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Sow broad beans, peas, onions, cabbages, radishes, lettuce and spinach. Transplant horse radish, eschallots, rhubarb, asparagus, leeks, and all culinary herbs. Save cabbages and onions for seed. Trench and manure new ground. Clean all beds from weeds. Pumpkins and vegetable marrow that have not yet been gathered, should now be done if quite ripe; taking care to store them in a dry place.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Plant biennial and perennial plants, bulbs, shrubs, ornamental trees, and edging. Keep grass walks, lawns, and flower borders clean. Take up dry, and store dahlia roots. Transplant native shrubs. Manure and trench new ground.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Plant nut, apple, pear, cherry, mulberry, olive, almond, quince, plum, apricot trees, &c. Dig in manure round all kinds of fruit trees. Take off all green autumnal fruit. Trench and prepare new ground.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Sow Cape and English barley, wheat, oats for hay crop, lucerne, &c. Tobacco should be all in this month. Gather cotton. Maize should also be ready this month.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Sow peas, beans, spinach, cauliflower, radish, parsley, onions, lettuce, mustard, cress, asparagus, rhubarb, &c. Draw the earth lightly round the stems of such young plants as are risen above the ground, such as beans, &c. Plant all culinary herbs. Trench and manure vacant ground.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Plant cuttings of the fuchsia, geranium, cactus, &c. Plant Cape bulbs, flowering shrubs, ornamental trees, herbaceous plants, edging, and borders. Prepare lawn and flower beds. Take up dahlia roots if not done last month. This is a good month for transplanting or removing.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Plant apple, pear, quince, apricot, and all kinds of fruit trees. Prune vines, and trim fruit trees, digging in manure carefully, so as not to cut the roots.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Sow spring barley, but on fine soil; and wheat, if the season has been dry. Gather maize. Prepare new land for cotton by deep ploughing. The crop should be all in by the middle of this month.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Sow peas, broad beans, French beans, cucumbers, lettuce, cabbage, Swedish turnip, Brussels sprouts, broccoli, endive, leeks, onions, melons, pumpkins, vegetable marrow, radishes, spinach, parsley, capsicums, tomatoes, &c. Plant potatoes, thyme, majorum, garlic, eschaloats, rhubarb, kale, artichokes, lettuce, cauliflower, and cabbage. Dress asparagus and artichoke beds. Keep all the ground free from weeds as far as possible.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Plant dahlias, carnations, ranunculus, anemones, and roses. Train climbing plants. Protect tulips and other tender flowers. Sow tender annuals and other flowers, as stocks, &c. Destroy all insects. Hand weed small beds; and water flower beds should the weather be dry.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Be careful in removing all insects and keeping the ground clean. Tend vines, and put out cuttings. Sow melons of all sorts. Prune, graft, and plant young trees.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Sow tobacco, maize, Swedish turnips, sorghum, lucerne, and all artificial grasses. Sow cotton seeds. All kinds of manuring and pruning should be completed early this month.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Sow peas, French beans, celery, onions, turnips, pumpkins, vegetable marrow, cucumber, lettuce, radish, endive, cabbage, broccoli. Plant sweet potatoes, capsicums, garlic, eschalots. Earth up celery. At all times keep the beds free from weeds; and this month they will be showing themselves with strong desire to dispute the possession of the ground.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Sow balsams and tender annuals, biennials, perennials, stocks, and mignonette. Continue to train climbing plants. The roots of the bulbs that have done flowering should be taken up and stored. Water frequently in dry weather, and shade plants recently transplanted.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Look carefully after new budded trees. Remove all barren shoots and tendrils from vines. Lop all fruit bearing shoots. Destroy all insects. Remove all suckers as they advance. Water well in dry weather.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Prepare new land. Sow maize and sorghum. Plant tobacco. Sow cotton seed, and keep the young plants free from weeds.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Sow pumpkins, cucumbers, cauliflowers, vegetable marrows, endive, lettuce, spinach, celery, peas, rhubarb. Water and shade cucumbers if weather be dry. Earth up celery. Keep all beds free from weeds, and thin plants where necessary.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Plant dahlias. When tulips, hyacinths, and other bulbs have done flowering, they should be taken up and dried. Propagate carnations by layers. clear flower borders, shrubberies, and walks from weeds and dead leaves. In dry weather do not spare water; but, as has been already remarked, this operation should only be performed after sundown.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Remove all useless shoots from fruit trees and grape vines; trim and tie up vines, exposing the bunches to the sun. Thin trees of superfluous fruit, and gather fruit as they ripen.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Attend carefully to young tobacco plants—keeping the ground clear of weeds. Earth up maize. Sow millet and sorghum. Watch young cotton plants. The harvest commences towards the end of this month.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Sow peas, beans, cabbages, cauliflowers, radishes, endive, carrots, parsnips, turnips, rhubarb, spinach. Plant potatoes, celery in trenches to blanch (earthing it up gradually), eschalots, cabbages, and cauliflowers. Clean and thin beds. Stop superfluous shoots of cucumber, pumpkin, &c. The routine for October, November, and December, is very much the same, both for the kitchen and the flower garden. At this season two things require to be constantly borne in mind, weed well and water well.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Plant all hardy kinds of annuals and dahlias for succession. Take up and dry bulbs. Shade and water as required.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Let the grapes receive great attention. Secure trees planted in the autumn from being shaken by the winds; destroy all insects; remove suckers; thin fruit, and gather as they ripen.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Top tobacco, removing all side shoots, and those that hang on the ground, leaving from eight to twelve, according to the size and strength of the plant. Earth up maize and potatoes. Attend to and regulate cotton plants. The harvest should be general this month.

NOTES ON THE GEOLOGY OF PARTS OF
NEW SOUTH WALES AND QUEENSLAND,
MADE IN 1842—43,
BY LUDWIG LEICHHARDT.

*Published in Germany in 1847. Translated by George H. F. Ulrich, Esq.,
(of the Geological Survey of Victoria,) and Edited by the REV. W. B. CLARKE, M.A., F.G.S.*

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

IN the year 1860, I had the pleasure of presenting to the colonial public, in the pages of Waugh's Almanac, Leichhardt's Journal of his journey from Moreton Bay to the Maranoa.

I have now the satisfaction of offering in an English dress the observations which my late distinguished friend had made on the geology of a considerable portion of this Colony (in which, at that period, was included the present Colony of Queensland) before he had commenced his more important geographical explorations; and, although subsequent researches have more completely unfolded the geological features of the country, yet there is so much of what is excellent and trustworthy in his notes—so much that has been confirmed, and so little to object to—that, although twenty three years have elapsed since the notes were written, they will, no doubt, come before many readers with the freshness of novelty, and be received, as bearing in a considerable degree the stamp of authority.

Having myself investigated the geology of almost every locality mentioned in the following pages, either before Leichhardt's arrival, in his company, or after his departure from the colony, I am enabled to testify to the value of the information he had obtained, and as set forth in a by no means unpleasing narrative.

The circumstances under which these Contributions to the Geology of New South Wales are now published in English, appear to warrant a few words of further explanation.

From conversations with the author and correspondence, I was long ago aware, that he had sent home in August 1845, an account of his geological investigations written in German, with a view to publication in his native land. And I had afterwards learned from a letter written by Professor Link, of Berlin, that the editors of the only journals in that capital then dedicated to geology and mineralogy had declined to publish more than selected extracts.

Mr. Link in that letter writes as follows:—

"As in Germany only two journals exist for geology and mineralogy, 'Bronn's Jahrbuch' and 'Karsten's Archiv.'" I took the opportunity of asking the editors of both the just-mentioned journals whether they would like to publish Mr. Leichhardt's memoir. Mr. Karsten tells me, he is not able to publish the whole, as some of the drawings according to his belief, prove not to be instructive enough; but he is quite willing to publish an extract of it, with a selection of the drawings. I, therefore, leave it to your own consideration what is to be done with the memoir."

At that time, it appears, even Leichhardt's countrymen did not feel sufficient interest in Australia to justify the expense of detailing through the press, observations which were considered to have only a local character, and to be insufficient to attract the attention of persons who occupy themselves with speculative general views, rather than with individual experiences. But such is frequently the lot of those who are engaged in a science of observation; so that he who is busied in collecting facts on which alone true theories can be founded, is often less thought of than the mere generaliser who, perhaps, without entering the field of observation, is satisfied to arrange in his studio, according to his own preconceived ideas or ambition, the results of those laborious enquiries, in which he has taken no part.

Not satisfied with the scanty information I had received, I took considerable trouble, but in vain, to find out whether any publication of Leichhardt's notes had taken place after 1846; but, it was not till 1863, that I learned from my friend Mr. Ulrich, that such a publication had taken place and that he possessed a copy of the book.

On borrowing it from him, I found that it contained many notes which I had previously read in a German M.S., which Leichhardt had left with me, containing a sort of mixed journal of his adventures, letters to myself and others, and notes on botany and geology. Some of these I had already translated with a view to publication; but when I found that Mr. Ulrich had begun the translation of the book, I urged him to complete it, and relinquished my own undertaking.

The translation which Mr. Ulrich thus accomplished, he afterwards sent to me with a view, if possible, of publication in Sydney, as the Melbourne publishers did not adventure to do so, and with an expressed desire, that I would prepare it for the press, and edit it with such revision as I might deem necessary for its successful issue.

I have, however, conscientiously abstained from interfering with any of Leichhardt's statements, geological views, or reasonings, whether opposed to, or agreeing with my own, preferring to express in the form of foot-notes (the responsibility attaching to which is acknowledged by my initials), what in 1866 it is necessary to say respecting what was written in 1842 and 1843. Without such occasional notes, it might be supposed, that Leichhardt's remarks contain all that is known of certain localities. Since his time, greater facilities have been afforded than he could have possessed for investigating many interesting particulars; and if, for instance, he knew less of the Newcastle Coal Field than is now known, it was no fault of his. And so, of other parts of the country examined by him.

The publication of his original observations in the present form will, however, serve to point out to the men of this time the great claims to merit which he undoubtedly exhibited, and the devoted manner in which from his first arrival in Sydney, he dedicated his time and abilities to the investigation and development of his adopted country.

The sketches and sections which accompanied the German work would have been necessarily excluded from the present publication, as they would have added considerably to the cost, which is entirely borne by the proprietors of the Almanac, and the translator and myself do not feel justified in incurring any expense. But by a curious incident, that could not be now undertaken; for, after I had returned the German book to Mr. Ulrich, it was unfortunately consumed by a bush-fire, which destroyed one of his camp, and put him to a very considerable loss. It is also believed, so far as our enquiries have gone, that no other copy at present exists in Australia.

The readers of the "Notes" may be assured, that, notwithstanding this impossibility of reference, for the purpose of further revision, to the German book, I am convinced by my recollection and references to M.S.S. of Leichhardt's still in my possession, that no greater variance exists between the present version and the original, than the few necessary adaptations of idiomatic expressions and style which the author himself would have approved, and which involve no departure from the strict limits within which I had determined to exercise the freedom of revision assigned to me by Mr. Ulrich.

W. B. CLARKE.

St. Leonard's, 9th November, 1866.

NOTES, &c.

THE study of the Geology of Australia was a few years since solely confined to the coast itself. Nature there assists the geologist with fine sections, which not only most beautifully exhibit the different seams of coal, but show also pretty clearly their relations to the sandstone of the Hawkesbury and Port Jackson. Such sections are found in Newcastle on the Hunter River, at the entrance to Lake Macquarie, and between Lake Macquarie and Brisbane Water. The coal seams thin out at this latter place, and seem to disappear in a kind of puddingstone, which more to the South gives way to the coarse grained sandstone. The shores of Illawarra, South of Sydney, are also said to exhibit fine and instructive sections, and I hope that the Rev. W. B. CLARKE who made the examination of that part of the colony his special study, will soon make known to us the results of his investigations.* The work of Count Strzelecki, who traveled over much of the colony, between the Liverpool Range and Port Phillip is also anxiously looked for.† I have endeavored to trace the geological relations of Newcastle partly towards Brisbane Water, partly Westerly up the Hunter River. Count Strzelecki having, however, visited these localities also, I need only give a short account. I visited Liverpool Plains, North-Westerly of the Liverpool Range, and travelled thence to Moreton Bay, where I resided for several months, examining the surrounding districts. On my return journey I took the road across the high land of New England, and traversing the Dividing chain between the Hastings and Gloucester, went down to Port Stephens. In the interior of the country, the geologist seldom meets with instructive sections. The hills are smoothly rounded and covered with soil, the drainage channels being generally shallow. Where sections occur, the lowest formations are but very seldom exposed. All this makes it very difficult to determine with any certainty the true succession of the beds. No public works, no roads,‡ no channels, tunnels, or fortifications, assist the geologist in his investigations. The digging of wells also is a rare occupation of the inhabitants, and as they are frequently disappointed by striking brackish instead of sweet water during the sinking, there is also very little hope of deriving information hereafter from this mode of opening the ground.§ I am convinced that the Geology of Australia must, in general, commence at Newcastle, and that the geologist must gradually proceed thence towards the North, South, and West; because a series of beds are exposed at this locality, which neither Westward nor perhaps along the whole coast lines of Australia may appear again so completely exposed. The most perfect sections of Newcastle, at Morris's Bath and below Shepherd's Hill, show in downward progression the following beds:—

1. Immediately beneath the soil a kind of puddingstone, (iron conglomerate) which is traceable along the whole basin of the Hunter. It contains numerous rounded pebbles of porphyry granite and quartzite, and also frequently sharp angular pieces of a whitish kind of quartz, especially in the upper part of the Hunter, at the Wybong. Besides these, occur rounded pebbles of a dark blue rock, entirely different from the igneous rocks of the Liverpool Range. It is probably a kind of indurated claystone, similar to that, for instance, which I found extensively developed at the Gwydir. These pebbles in general appear to me of great importance. With exception of the latter, about whose nature I am still doubtful, they can all be easily identified with the different igneous rocks developed in the basin of the Hunter. Pebbles of the rock at the Liverpool Range are, however, wanting amongst the number, a circumstance which leads to the conclusion that the protrusion of this igneous rock to the surface was posterior to the formation of the puddingstone.

2. Underneath the puddingstone, whose thickness ranges in different localities, from several feet to high mountain masses, follows a thin seam of a brown bituminous clay, (similar to the German kohlenletter) containing impressions of ferns, which changed, however, at a small distance to a real coal seam. The steepness of the cliffs prevented my getting access to the latter. Standing at Morris's Bath, it is, however, easily recognised as the uppermost seam of coal. It forms, I believe, an equivalent to the top seam of coal on Nobby's Island. In the section exhibited, at Glendonbrook; near which Mr. Scott's coal mine is situated, a similar (perhaps the same) coal seam may be observed.

3. Indurated clay and sandstone, 20 and 30 feet thick. This rock is in other localities of a light yellow colour, soft and eaten into cavities by atmospheric agencies: I found in a quarry of this sandstone on the top of Shepherd's Hill, the impression of a Calamite. On Nobby's Island, the clays are 10 feet thick, the yellow sandstone, 26 feet, and one of a whitish colour, 10 feet. On the seaside both clays and sandstones are there traversed by a basaltic dyke, the heat of which has changed them so completely that the identity of the rock in the different portions can only be seen by tracing one into the other.

4. The second coal seam (6 feet), appears in other sections beneath the beacon as the first, the generally thin upper seam disappearing frequently, or being overlooked in the high cliffs. It is overlain by bituminous clay, called chitter by the miners, and has been worked beneath the Beacon. Its coal is not of the same good quality as that of the 3rd and 4th coal seams. The bituminous clays in its neighbourhood, are full of impressions of fern leaves.

5. A bluish clayey sandstone, hard, and cleaving into large blocks. It was used for the construction of the breakwater, intended to connect Nobby's Island with the mainland. Beneath the fire beacon this sandstone is 20 feet thick, and contains accumulations of a nearly loose sand, pyritous charred logs, often standing vertical, a layer of strontian nodules, and a flour-like substance. Underneath the layer of strontian nodules I found pieces of coal which, from their outward appearance, I could not distinguish from the seam coal. Beneath Morris's Bath occur in the upper part frequently nodules of iron ore, which show crystals of carbonate of iron inside.

6. Third coal seam at high water level. The real coal is, as the previous one, covered by bituminous clay full of impressions of ferns and equiseta.* Clay and coal form a bed 5 feet thick.

7. A puddingstone containing logs converted into iron ore. These logs are of various degrees of thickness, appear somewhat compressed, and show generally a deep furrow on one side, which in section produces a kidney shaped figure. One often finds the trunk of a tree, often the branches, often the stump with the roots. They lie in all directions, and appear to have been thus deposited during the formation of the conglomerate in which they are found. The component parts of this puddingstone are the same as those of the upper one, whence blocks have broken loose and rolled down to the shore. The lighter colour alone allows one to recognise them as belonging to the upper rocks. Frequently, however, one has an opportunity of observing the puddingstone passing into a bluish clayey sandstone, and, whilst walking on the top of the hard rocky ancient shore, of finding the same varieties of rocks which on the present margin of the sea are represented by large tracts of pebbles, alternating with fine white sand and clay. Whilst the trunks of trees deposited in the puddingstone are sometimes impregnated with oxide of iron, fossil silicified wood occurs frequently on the surface of the ground, not only round Newcastle, but also over the whole country, especially about Seone, Invermein, Segenhoe, &c. Only in the Moreton Bay district, (between Cameron's and Lachlan's stations) I found similar fossil wood in sandstone; whilst in Darling Downs, in the sandstone of the Condamine, (beneath Bracker's residence) the trunks converted into iron ore were very abundant. Fossil wood is met with in an indentation of Lake Macquarie, and from its mode of deposition described by Mr. Clarke† belongs, perhaps, to this same puddingstone, which overlies the lowest coal seam.

8. The fourth seam of coal. The same is beneath the beacon, only visible during low water. At Morris's Bath it lies 12-16 feet above the water level, dips, however, further on towards the sea again. Along the coast this coal seam is the only one, from above which springs of fresh water rise; and I was told that the influx of the same causes great trouble in the coal mines of the Australian Company. The whole bed of this coal including the clay seams is about 7 feet thick; and the upper layers are divided from the lower by a coating of plastic clay.

9. Below this last coal appears a soft clayey sandstone, massively developed, which much resembles the rock separating the 3rd and 4th coal seams, i.e., in places where the same is not puddingstone. It contains in abundance nodules of iron ore, which show inside fine impressions of ferns. A seam of this rock has also well preserved impressions of Pecopteris. The fossil plants occurring in the different clay seams, show generally in all of them the same character. The several distinctions which exist may, perhaps, have rather a local bearing than indicate a difference in the seams. The finest impressions of Glossopteris are found on Nobby's Island, in the upper coal seam; they are of a broad lancet shape, frequently with obtuse points, sometimes nearly elliptical. The dichotomous division of the leave-nerves is very apparent; frequently, however, one observes the upper small branches of the lower nerve passing into the lower branches of the upper, producing thus an elongated network, discernible only by careful examination. There occur, however, also impressions in which this network is very open, a circumstance which might lead one to regard them as new species. In the third coal seam beneath Great Red Head, these impressions are very large; it is possible

* Phyllothea—W. B. C.

† "On the fossil pine forest of Kurrur-Kurran, in the inlet of Awaaba, N.S.W.," by Rev. W. B. Clarke, M.A., F.G.S., Proceedings Geological Society, IV., 161, 1843.

even to obtain a whole leaf. Pecopteris is very frequent at Morris's Bath in a stratum beneath the fourth coal seam, where the iron ore nodules contain Equiseta,* and in several very fine different species of Glossopteris are met with, especially in the top coal seam on Nobby's Island. I have named the same, to enable me to distinguish and recognise them again in other seams. Equisetum gracile.† The cross section appears in this instance in the shape of a rosette, which caused the children of the Rev. C. P. N. Wilton, a sedulous collector, to call them butterflies. Several impressions seem to be like algae; others are linear with parallel veins—fresh water or swamp plants. Heart shape impressions about 2 lines broad and 3 lines long may, perhaps, be fructifications, one particularly reminds me of the seedpod of Botrychium. Only two impressions belonging to the animal kingdom came under my notice, one of a fish,‡ the other of a coralline, named by me Corallinites Wiltoni, from Mr. Wilton having discovered it in the upper carbonaceous clay on Nobby's Island.§

The absence of fossil shells renders it difficult to identify the different layers of coal and sandstone of the middle with the sandstones of the Upper Hunter. It is likewise impossible, on account of the remarkable identity of the plant impressions through the four coal seams, to unite the impressions of the sandstone of Harpur's Hill and Glendon with those of any certain seam of the four. I have sent several impressions to the Geological Museum of the Jardin des Plantes at Paris, which came from the coal workings of the Australian Company, very probably from a coal seam wrought 90 feet below the sea level. One was, if I remember right, a large fern leaf, reminding me of the form of "Acrostichum Alciorne;" the other seemed to be a "Lepidodendron." Although the necessary quick packing of these fossils allowed me no time to determine them,—a task which on account of the limited number of my books, would under any circumstances have been difficult or impossible for me, still I could see that they were new and differed entirely from the common impressions of the Newcastle carbonaceous clays.||

Mr. Threlkeld sank at Lake Macquarie unsuccessfully a shaft for a lower coal seam. It is possible he did not go deep enough. My former belief was, that his coal, which is a sort of lignite, was identical with the upper seam of Newcastle. However, after reading Mr. Clarke's paper on the fossil trees, which lie immediately above Threlkeld's coal, I changed my opinion, and believed the same to be identical with the fourth Newcastle coal seam. Still I see well enough that fossil trees occur also between the second and third coal (beneath the Beacon), and that therefore they are of no value in the comparison of the beds.

The coal seams and the clayey sandstones of Newcastle are penetrated by several dykes of a basaltic or phonolitic rock, which have often strikingly altered the adjoining strata. The most remarkable of these dykes occurs on the east side of Nobby's Island, a rocky islet which with its steep cliffs appears to be as if forcibly detached from the mainland. This dyke strikes N.W. by N. and S.E. by S., and is visible up the whole length of the cliffs. The clays and sandstones are altered into a hard flinty rock.¶ Between the firebeacon and Morris's bath are three other dykes visible. The first strikes N. $\frac{1}{2}$ W., by S. $\frac{1}{2}$ E.; the second S.S.E., N.N.W.; the third S. $\frac{1}{2}$ E. N. $\frac{1}{2}$ W. The cracks, which from Morris's bath penetrate through the coast cliffs, strike S. $\frac{1}{2}$ E., N. $\frac{1}{2}$ W. On comparing the directions of these dykes and cracks, it is found that they do not form a single line, but a band ranging between S.E. by S., & S. $\frac{1}{2}$ W., and therefore about 36 deg 35 min. wide. If now it is considered that the direction of a volcanic shock was at right angles to the above general strike, we might be led to look perhaps to New Caledonia or to the volcanos in the neighbourhood of this island, as the focus of a former extensive volcanic activity. Shocks of earthquakes are indeed at the present time not rare here, and I myself had an opportunity of feeling a really strong one at six o'clock in the morning of the 24th of October, 1842. Mr. Wilton told me that this was the fourth which he had felt during his residence at Newcastle.* The remarkably regular disruption of the sandstone which, below the fourth coal seam of Morris's bath and this side of the Long Beach, forms the coast cliffs, is thus explained by these earthquake shocks. One would suppose we trod upon a regular net of masonry work, formed by the protruding hard edges of the disrupted blocks of rock. In Sydney there occur similar cracks which always penetrate in a distinct direction the sandstone. The same had long before this attracted my attention, and it was especially at Fort Macquarie, below the footpath to the Botanical Garden, and at the waterfall, where I observed them. The volcanic products being there, however, not so apparent, I supposed that though shocks and shakes of earthquakes were the cause of the cracks, still I was less firmly convinced of it, than here, where I broke with my hammer the volcanic rocks filling the cracks. Those cracks at Sydney, too narrow to admit the rising of the fiery fluid mass, allowed only the gaseous substances to escape and harden their walls, and the sea afterwards sweeping loose pebbles over on the sandstone, produced no effect upon the hard ferruginous margins of the blocks, whilst on the contrary, their inner portion gave way to the denuding force, and became gradually hollowed out. It is however also possible that ferruginous waters percolating through these cracks deposited part of their iron on the walls and hardened them.†

¶ This is the so-called "Chert Bed," the base of which is about 30 feet above the sea. Chert occurs further to the south along the cliffs at a point which I ascertained in 1846 to be 250 feet above the sea. But it is not confined to these localities.—W.B.C.

Two dykes, similar to those mentioned at Newcastle, occur, one between Lake Macquarie and Tuggerah Beach Lake, penetrating there the pudding-stone; the other on Point Stephens, the southern extremity of Port Stephens, where it has broken through the porphyry. The first strikes S.W., N.E., and reappears in several consecutive headlands; a more narrow crack rises parallel to it; the latter dyke, 3 to 4 feet broad, strikes E.S.E., W.N.W., and this also has a narrower parallel crack accompanying it; both cease abruptly and are faulted 3 to 4 feet. The basalt at this spot contains a great deal of Peridot.

The beds have, in consequence of these, undergone frequent alterations, and one sees at several places very extensive faults. Thus it becomes really difficult to identify the different coal seams of Newcastle with those of Lake Macquarie. One of the most striking faults occurs just on this side of the lagoon, south of Newcastle, being at the entrance of the Valley of Palms. The coal beds east of the crack interrupting the continuation,

* My own observations lead me to the conclusion that all our present shocks are secondary. Shocks in South Australia appear to be nearly coincident in time with disturbances in New Zealand. In New South Wales earthquakes have occurred about the period of eruption of White Island in New Zealand.—W. B. C.

† I have described numerous instances of these dykes in my essay on "Transmutation of Rocks." (See Transactions of Philosophical Society of N. S. Wales., 1862-5.) I have found since that in some cases they are true trapezian dykes.—W. B. C.

seem to have been raised here far above the sea level, because at the entrance of the valley one sees at the sea level two coal seams parted by a layer of grey clay and sandstone, and these two seams unite a few hundred yards easterly in a single one. Close to the cliffs of Great Red Head there was formerly a coal bed on fire, and abundance of scorific are found on the slope. The aged blacks remember this fire very well, which like that burning still in the interior of Mount Wingen on the Page River, was caused and fed by the action of water upon the pyritous coal. If now we regard the four regular coal seams in the neighbourhood of Newcastle, and consider the conditions under which they were formed, there arises at once the difficulties of an explanation, perhaps more prominently presented than in any other coal district. These coal seams are either down-pressed and crushed forests, such as now cover the ground in South America, so rich in vegetable substances; or they are the plant remains which streams brought from the interior of large continents, and which the calm waters let fall in wide deposits, or which were seized by currents and spread over the bottom of the sea. If we suppose the former, it follows that the bottom protruded four times out of the water, and became covered with dense vegetation, and that it sank down four times underneath the sea level to permit the vegetation of the following pudding-sandstone and clay layers to be buried. We find now that the tenacious clays which form the hanging wall and the underlie of the coal mass are especially rich in the impressions of fern leaves. The greater number of ferns which we observe growing, have no deciduous foliage; it dies on the stem and decays gradually. Yet the fern leaf impressions which we find in the tenacious clays never exhibit roots, and never appear sickly; they are fine and perfect, just as if they were carefully cut off from their stems and wrapped between clay beds. They cannot have grown at the spot where we find them. Why should the root stumps have been so generally lost to us? Some impressions which I take to be alga show a sort of root stump. They became therefore probably buried in the element of the then forming clay layers belonging to them, whilst the fern leaves belonged to stems with foliage falling off, which resisted the floods that carried off the fallen leaves. That the coal layers do not owe their origin to dense forests is made evident by the vertical fossil stems, which in their natural position upon their roots were covered by clayey sandstone, before their structure was destroyed in the surrounding medium. Here have we real trees which grew on the spot where we find their fossil remains. Had the coal mass been a primeval forest, which rooted upon the underlying tenacious clays, we would also find in it stems and roots or casts belonging to them. It might be possible that vegetable substances accumulated in extensive peat bogs and morasses, which in consequence of a change of level were covered by the sea, in which the clays, sands, or drifts were deposited upon them. Herewith pretty well accord the many iron nodules, just as at the present day iron ore is formed in peat bogs and morasses. This supposition opposes, however, several circumstances in the composition of the coal beds. The tenacious clay beds contain the mere plant impressions where they lie nearer to the coal, where often occur thin coal seams separated from the principal mass. The first highest coal bed of Newcastle thins out to a thin layer of carbonaceous clay. Why should we, compelled as we are to explain the formation of the clay shales by deposition of clays and fern leaves swept thither, take refuge when explaining even the thinnest coal seam, in a forcible means of change in level, instead of supposing that vegetable substances, which large freshets and floods brought out of the interior of a continent, were deposited in larger or smaller measures? It now appears that the finest and minutest vegetable substances were first deposited, since the deepest portion of every coal layer contains without exception the finest coal, whilst the upper beds or Chitter change more into coal shales and bituminous clays. The fourth and third coal layers are the richest, and are besides nearest to each other. The second is much farther distant from the third, and the uppermost one much farther distant from the second. Were the disposition regular the upward increasing distances of the coal layers would prove that the period was longer during the larger floods. I do not know in what relation the layers below the fourth coal stand to it and to each other. We have to expect from Count Strzelecki the disclosures necessary to this.

The position of the beds is in general horizontal, or rather, perhaps, undulating. Thus we see, that the beds rise from the beacon towards Morris's Bath, and then dip again towards Long Beach. Similar differences in height we find in the stretch of the coast towards Lake Macquarie.

To judge from the position of the beds, the whole Eastern coast border of New Holland, and probably a great part of the Continent, was formed at the same time, and it seems, that the coal beds run out towards the South on the pudding and sandstone in thin layers, which then, perhaps, entirely disappear. Still, at other places, they reappear under similar conditions, and at similar elevations. Thus, we find thin layers of clay shales with obscure impressions of the remains of plants in the sandstone of Sydney, and a thin coal seam was observed by me in the sandstone of Glendon, which Mr. Scott used as building stone.

Before I leave Newcastle, I must make mention of an interesting formation of the lower coast district, which (if we may judge from present conditions of primeval ones) might always be of importance in the explanation of the latter. Between Newcastle and Port Stephens, between the mouth of the Hunter and the Porphyry Mountains, which enclose Port Stephens, towards the South, stretches in a wide arc, a sandy coast 18 miles long. From the coast inland, alternate longer and shorter ranges of hills, (perhaps, 50 feet high), with patches of ground slightly varied by rounded low hillocks and basin shaped hollows. All are formed of loose sand, covered with a scanty grass and scrub, frequently with the remains of still living sea shells, which often occur in thick layers, and can be used for lime burning. Towards the West extends a wide swampy plain, which is principally covered by Cyperaceæ. This plain lies only a little above the water-level of the Hunter and the sea, and extends from the Hunter to the recesses of Tilligerry. Still further westward, opposite Hexham, and before one reaches Raymond Terrace, the light sea sand with the scrub peculiar to this soil again appears. If we walk along the Western foot of the previously mentioned hills, we frequently find old Eucalyptus trees with nearly their whole stems buried in the sand, clearly showing that the sands even now-a-days progress towards the West, although the vegetation has considerably limited their advance. It is however evident, that the whole district from Raymond Terrace to Tilligerry and Newcastle was formerly covered by the sea, and formed one wide bay.* One observes similar conditions between Great Red Head and Lake Macquarie—a sandy coast arc nine miles long of sand hillocks there covered with scrub, which fill the whole space between Great Red Head and the entrance to Lake Macquarie, as well as half the length of the lake itself. Tuggerah Beach Lake shows nearly the same conditions. The entrance to it as well as that to Lake Macquarie is nearly sanded up, and is only kept open by the flood and ebb tides.

The entire East coast of Australia is full of instances of these sand ac.

* This view is perfectly correct. Independent observations of my own have long ago led me to the same conclusion, which I have before publicly announced. There is no doubt that the surface in part is Pleistocene, and that there have been elevation and silting up of the coast. W. B. C.

emulations. Still, as I have but seen the three just mentioned localities, I will only draw the attention of the reader finally to an interesting fact, common to all. The sandy coast is always on the northern side towards the south, the surf breaks against mountains and cliffs. From out of the delta between Port Stephens, Raymond Terrace, and Newcastle, rose probably the Porphyry mountains of Port Stephens as islands. At their south-western foot, commenced probably the accumulation of moving sea sands, as the coast was gradually rising (I adopt the opinion of those who believe in a progressive elevation of this coast)* and travelled onward towards the south, till the power of the current put limits to it. Therefore, also, the sand belt in the north is broadest and runs out to a sharp point on the North shore of Newcastle. That the sanding up progressed always from the north towards the south was probably due to the north and south sea currents on the east coast of New Holland. It may be anticipated, that in the course of thousands of years Lake Macquarie and Tuggerah beach lake, into which no important strong rivulets (creeks) drain, will be entirely filled with sand.

A similar fact has, as far as I observed, happened near Newcastle and in the neighbourhood of Sydney. Between the cliffs occurs a wide interruption (break) between Windmill-hill† and Burwood. This break, in which, probably, a former arm of the sea separated Windmill-hill as an islet from the mainland, is now filled up with sand hillocks 30 and 40 feet in height.

Sir Thomas Mitchell drew my attention to similar conditions in the neighbourhood of Sydney. It becomes here probable, that an arm of the sea formerly separated South Head from the mainland, as Point Darling and the country southward towards Bondi and Botany, consists of real dunes.

On moving further from the coast, we find coal nearly in the whole course of the Hunter. Still we never observe more than one single layer—and this single layer appears always in the bed of the creeks and the river; as now the river declines very slightly in a long distance, and as the coal never appears far from the junctions of the creeks with the Hunter, we must conclude, that we have always to do with the same coal bed.‡ With which of the Newcastle beds this is identical it is difficult to determine. Yet if we argue from the elevation above the sea level, and the horizontal position justifies perhaps this proceeding, it becomes probable that we have to do with the third (coal) seam. I observed the coal at Minmi, beneath the Sugar Loaf, which consists of pudding and sandstone. Sir Thomas Mitchell makes mention of the coal in Blaxland's Creek; it occurs in Black Creek, in Glendonbrook, in Westbrook, in Fallbrook, in Taybrook, in the bed of the Hunter at Ravensworth, and in the banks of the Hunter at Bengalla. The burning mountain, Wingen, points to their presence in the neighbourhood of Seone. In Glendonbrook and at Ravensworth the coal lies underneath pudding stone and conglomerate. It is accompanied by clay shales with impressions of leaves. At Bengalla, the clay shales are covered by a series of clayey sandstone beds. I have already mentioned that I observed in the sandstone of Glendon, a thin coal seam, and that at a little distance from the coal at Glendonbrook, brown coal shales appear in the steep bank about thirty feet above the creek, reminding one very vividly of the top coal seam in Shepherd's Hill, Newcastle.

* In all the north side of bays along the east coast of New Holland drift pumice is found, and it comes in from the north-east and is cast up on the north beaches by the reflux of the sea. See this stated fully in my paper on "Atmospheric deposits of dust and ashes, with remarks on the drift pumice of the coasts of New Holland" in the Tasmanian Journal of Natural Science, 1842, vol. i, page 322—342. † Waverley or Woolloomooloo. W. B. C.

‡ This is now proved to be an insufficient conclusion. There are in the Lower Hunter Coal Fields at least sixteen seams three feet thick. W. B. C.

The isolated occurrence of the coal in the district of the Hunter is probably to be explained by the slight undulation of the beds, which I have already mentioned above when describing the coast sections. Wherever I observed the coal the beds were nearly perfectly horizontal or very slightly inclined. Only at Sawyer's Point, in Glendonbrook, they form a larger angle, the clay shales are altered into thermantide. Felspar porphyry appears beneath the coal, and is probably the cause of its elevation.*

Thus far I have given a general view of the geological relations in the district of the Hunter. I shall now mention those localities which I have myself cursorily seen or more carefully examined. Close to Maitland a fine, hard, light, yellow sandstone is quarried. The hills on the right hand side of the road from Maitland to Morpeth seem to be formed of a series of sandstone beds. Stones which for building the barracks of Morpeth were brought to Newcastle, contain numbers of bivalve and univalve shells, which I partly found again in Harpur's Hill.

Harpur's Hill, eight miles westward of Maitland, is rich in fossil shells, and the whole locality, from the Hunter beneath Mrs. Harpur's dwelling to the road, which exposes a portion of Harpur's Hill to the eye of the geologist, is very instructive. If we commence the examination with the surface of Harpur's Hill, we find a drift of porphyry, amygdaloid rocks, and granite, above and in an alluvium of black and brownish colour. Underneath the same appears a thick layer of brick clay, which is very strongly developed in the steep river banks and the drainage gutters between the hills. After this follows a coarse conglomerate, very ferruginous, containing Spiriferæ. Larger pieces washed loose by the rains are distributed over the hills, especially in front of Mrs. Harpur's residence. Immediately beneath the road in the direction from the hill to the house, there is a rise of rich black soil covered with open forest. This rise consists of igneous rocks having a felspathic base belonging to the trachytes. In a deep drainage gutter to the left of this direction, one finds this rock much decomposed, and as if it were just interstratified. It rests upon sandstone, which everywhere inclines to a conglomerate. Spirifera and Trochus often with the rest, often filled with calcspar, besides Megadesmus (Pachydomus) frequent *Pecten*s and many other shells. Turritiles are also very abundant. All these shells are especially frequent in the sandstone cliffs of the garden. Fenestella was especially found in the sandstone in the ravine below the stockyard. It occurs likewise in the sandstone of Harpur's Hill, in the upper beds of which I observed Equisetum obtuse striatum,† a fact which leads us back again to the fossils of the coal layers of Newcastle.

The road section shows on a large scale, the bedding of a greenish sandstone, which (on the top) is covered by whitish layers, above which lie rounded ferruginous masses full of Spiriferæ. Between the former two lies at one place a black loose soil. It seems as if the sandstone once formed here a steep cliff, and the former valley was filled up with a clayey alluvium. It is remarkable, that the conglomerate could preserve so many shells, as the action of water on pebbles is so destructive to organic substances. Still, there seem to have been prevailing conditions here, similar to those in the neighbourhood of Mr. William Brook's residence at Lake Macquarie, where iron ochre deposited by a spring form quickly a conglomerate between the pebbles in the lake and fresh pebble detritus. The beds dip here, as in Wyndham's quarry at an angle of 25-30 deg. towards North-West. If we walk however, on the beach, towards the Valley of Palms, we find the greatest number of large shells at those places, at which the sea principally throws up pebbles.

* I believe, and so does Strzelecki, that the porphyry is not all of one age, but has risen often consecutively in the same area. But it is very doubtful whether there is any well authenticated case of coal having been altered by porphyry in the region in question. There are various other igneous rocks in the country about Glendon Creek. W. B. C.

† Phyllothea. What a confirmation is this of the facts maintained by me as to the age of the coal formation! W. B. C.

Let us now compare the beds, which become visible in the neighbourhood of Glendon. We find, firstly, in Jump Up Creek, (or Bell's Creek) between Black Creek and Mr. Bell's dwelling, the calcareous Zoophyta—small Porphyry sandstone with a great number of Fenestellæ. If we travel along the creek to the river, there appear in the banks of the river pudding and clayey sandstone full of shells. The most of them are found also beneath Mr. Bell's garden. At the woolshed, Mr. Scott has had a well sunk; he was, however, not so fortunate as to find water, but the labourers brought many fine shells to light. This pudding stone leads to the quarries a mile to the North of Glendon, in which I found the before-mentioned coal seam and many impressions of fern leaves, which again bring us in contact with the formations of Newcastle. The elevation of these hills amounts hardly to 70 feet. They form the boundary of the plain through which the river runs, and appear to cut off the alluvial formation. If we consider the different quarries conjointly, we find at the farthest westward point, where the creek touches the range of hills a clayey, cleaved sandstone, coloured by iron ochre, which shows impressions of ferns. Above this lies a bluish hard sandstone of splendid quality, nearly too hard for working. The same shows different layers, and some of them appear likewise to contain impressions. It is, however, covered upward by a jointed but harder sandstone, which shows the articulated tree of Nobby's Island, as also fern leaf impressions. Above where the road first touches the range, there is white clay with a coal seam, and above this again sandstone, of which several beds are likewise quarried, and which is of a brownish colour. In a crack of the coarse-grained sandstone of the first quarry I found calcspar. Close to the coal seam occur in the clay rare impressions of leaves, especially the net-work fern leaf. The beds dip very steeply to the North, and the stonemason complained of the difficulty of digging out the blocks. He had worked at many places in the colony, (he said), yet everywhere he found the beds horizontal. In the real quarry itself the coal seam is wanting, and in its stead one finds a bed of clay shale, with many egg-shaped, and broad spatula-shaped fern leaf impressions, which, in the hard sandstone are often very beautifully preserved. Close above the clay shales occurs a thin bed of limestone concretions, the same which occur also in the clays at the Hunter River.

Descending Glendon to the river bed, we find, above, a pudding stone with large pebbles, a thin bed of clay and above this a loose ferruginous sandstone about two inches thick, which contains ribbed sea shells. It contains also many impressions of stems; one sees also nodules of a foot and more in diameter, which are distinguished by their red iron color. On walking down the river towards Mr. Bell's residence new beds rise gradually above the water level. Here I found a Trochus, the only univalve which I was able to discover in this conglomerate, and six blocks of an older conglomerate with traces of shells. I found, likewise, Spirifera in a pebble from the pudding stone opposite Mr. Kellman's dwelling. Large boulders of a hard yellowish quartz rock are enclosed in this conglomerate. Pegmatite boulders of a feldspathic character, porphyries and slate pebbles are frequent; and below Mr. Bell's garden lies a fine block of a whitish granite full of quartz and mica with little feldspar. Here I found also a boulder of a whitish marble about one foot in diameter, which was, however, not in the conglomerate, and was probably swept down from the upper part of the Hunter or one of its tributaries, since we now know that important limestone ranges with splendid caves exist at Crany, where the road from New England comes down to the Hunter district.*

The conglomerate becomes gradually a slaty clayey rock with less numerous pebbles and some extraordinarily large boulders. Then occur shells, but much pressed out of shape.

Pseudomorph crystals appear, which occur at another locality in greater perfection.† The lower we descend into the conglomerate, the more finely abraded mica plates occur. Ostrea, Hemicardium, Spirifera, and Fenestella occur, and whilst the latter remind us of Bell's Creek and the formations of Harpur's Hill, we connect the pseudomorph crystals with the blue clays beneath Dr. Glennie's residence. The dip of the beds is about 10 degrees, about N.W., obliquely towards the river.

Passing from Glendon up the river, we find in the steep river bank a projecting point, consisting of a hard argillaceous rock which has resisted the river current. Behind this succeed very micaceous clays, which contain pseudomorph crystals and spheroidal nodules. They rest upon large lenticular shaped masses of sandstone, of which thirty and more are freed from the surrounding clay by the current, and show now regular cleavage joints.

The joints run partly from E.S.E., W.N.W., partly from the periphery towards the centre. Farther on, in the flat river banks the direction of the cracks deviates a little. One system runs E. by S., W. by N.; the other cuts this obliquely off, by which those rhombic figures are formed. Above the blue clays again lies sandstone which passes into pudding stone.

Those gigantic sandstone lenses the rock of which effervesces a little in acid, show the greatest convexity above, the lesser one below. They resemble gigantic beehives.‡ Sir Thomas Mitchell tried to determine their relative positions one against the other, yet there is no rule discoverable. Sometimes they lie three behind each other and the fourth deviates. There is no doubt that their greater hardness is due to the carbonate of lime which cemented the clays together. These lenses one sees in a fine geological section in the neighbourhood of Singleton, in the steep banks of the Hunter, united by a hard layer of the same kind of rock.

In the level of the river bed occur micaceous clays with spheroidal and conchoidal jointing. Upon these rests a layer of hard clay about 1½ feet thick, with small mica flakes, the hardness of which is probably due to carbonate of lime. This layer swells up from 20 to 30 feet in gigantic bosses. Above this again occur the micaceous clays with pseudomorph crystals and druses rich in carbonate of lime. These crystals form a very nearly regular layer, although they occur also distributed promiscuously. Higher up they are eaten into and covered with gypsum. Above the blue clay lies a yellow clay without mica, and in this occur gypsum veins horizontal and vertical, gypsum layers, gypsum concretions, and druses with lenticular crystals. The gypsum is foliated and fibrous. Quite at the top the clays are covered by a mass of pebbles (drift) lying in tough or sandy loam. Below this layer is a bed of rock visible, but which I could not examine on account of the steepness and height of the section. In several of the lenses I found the joints filled by a vein of chalcedony four lines thick. In another vein found the impression of a bivalve. The formation of the gypsum appears still to be going on. I found upon the tolerably fresh surface of a lens fracture, a slight crystalline coating of gypsum, which must have been formed after the exposure of the lens to the atmosphere. I visited another quite similar locality higher up at Feret's whilst the sun was warming the wall, and the smell of the sulphuric acid was very striking. The section at Singleton is about 60 feet high above the water; the gigantic lenses lie 15 feet above the river, whilst beneath Mr. Glennie's they occur in the river bed.

* It is in this neighbourhood that a quartz lode with copper, lead and gold was found in 1866.—W.B.C.

† I found similar so-called pseudomorphs in fine crystalline limestone on the bank of the Page near Coyee, in the midst of the same grey paleozoic fossils, in a low cliff below which there is a coal seam.—W.B.C.

‡ I observed just such concretionary domes as those on the east side of Spring Hill, over coal beds, between Jericho and the Jordan in Tasmania.—W.B.C.

The so-called pseudomorph crystals are not really pseudomorph crystals but are the exertions of the carbonate of lime contained in the clay to unite in the crystal form of the rhombohedron peculiar to this substance. Often these crystals are single, often they form a St. Andrew's cross; often several of them are united together in the middle. The same mass occurs in perfectly round globules, and in druses of small crystals, and I am convinced that the comparison of these forms and the whole locality will appear very interesting to crystallographers and mineralogists.

In the neighbourhood of Black Creek in the valley from which Blind Creek conducts the rain water to Black Creek, the conglomerates are covered by a layer of concretions of silicious lime, which was probably deposited by calcareous waters, at the time when the basin formed a lake. The layer underlies a stratum of sandy brick clay, a foot thick. I was told that in the neighbourhood of this locality, a real limestone cropped out, which contained many shells. This limestone is identical either with the calcareous clayey zoophyte sandstone of Bell's Creek, or it forms a protruding point of that limestone, which occurs extensively developed at the Williams, and between Dungog and Stroud, forming, perhaps, the base of the Newcastle coal measures. This will be fully ascertained by the gradually increasing acquaintance with the shells.

On following the road from Glendon to the Paterson we cross, about 3 miles from the former, Glendonbrook, in the banks of which we find again the well-known puddingstone. The coal appears at several places in the bed of the creek, and clay shales containing ferns indicate its presence at another spot below the same puddingstone. In Westbrook, a creek which runs into the Glendonbrook, it is seen in the steep bank. About one mile farther (Sawyer's Point), may be noticed, as I have already previously remarked, underneath the coal, and the clay shales altered into Thermantide, the feldspar porphyry which occurs towards the North and East over the whole property of Mr. Scott. In front of the chief station, we enter a basin, the circumference and general conditions of which are best recognised from the top of a range, called Jack Shea's mountains. The South-Western and Southern margin is formed by an arc of ranges. Commencing at Tangorin, and ending with Tyraman; Tangorin falls towards the South-West to a range of hills called Tolka Tolka. Both mountain tops are formed of a rock, which contains the elements of syenite, (quartz, feldspar, and hornblende, Augite) which, however, are not closely united together, but lie in a grey cement. It is probable that similar igneous rocks appear over the whole circle of ranges. At the North the arc is not quite so perfect. They are isolated masses, or spurs running North and South towards the basin. The most important are Meranni and Jack Shea. Both show upon their tops the same rock, which we find upon the above-mentioned mountain summits.

From these striking and extensively seen mountain masses, some extraordinarily sharp ridges, the crests of which are covered with angular hard rocks, at first sight differing from the rounded sandstone and puddingstone blocks, descend to the basin. These bulky ridges are most comparable with lava streams; and at first sight seem to be recognised as such, by such dam-like elevations as occur in the neighbourhood of Clermont Ferrand. They have, however, not flowed, but appear to have been simultaneously discharged out of cracks, whilst perhaps the whole country was covered by water. The examination shows a porphyritic rock, which, in a grey, yellow, blue or red matrix includes white feldspar crystals. Sometimes these feldspar crystals become very small; still I have always found them present. Besides these feldspar crystals the different spurs contain other constituents. In some spurs Augite is present; in others black crystals seem to consist of horn blende; in others, and especially very often there occurs mica, sometimes black, sometimes of a very beautiful golden lustre. In many are quartz crystals, often very large and perfect. The matrix is extremely hard, produces sparks with the steel, and is according to all appearances of a silicious nature.

The greater number of these ridges run from North-West to North-East, and the longest one is traceable from Tangorin to Hebel, and perhaps to Dyring, a mountain on Falbrook. Several others less extensive run parallel to this one, and another which comes down Northward from Tyraman on the dividing range of the Paterson, strikes North-East and South-West, and runs therefore at right angles to the former. This direction reminds us of that of the basaltic dykes on the sea coast of Newcastle; and it would be highly interesting, to find, perhaps, over the whole colony a similar system of strike for the older and younger igneous rocks.

It could not be but expected that the pudding sandstones, which in the whole district of the Hunter are of such great thickness, should again occur here and everywhere along the slope of the high mountain ranges. It forms the masses of Tangorin, of Meranni, and the branch ranges of the Jack Shea. It seems to abut on the igneous rocks of these mountains, and is, in their neighbourhood, and near one of the porphyries, often extremely hardened and silicified.

In the particular district of the igneous rocks, especially northward of Glendonbrook, we meet everywhere with a soft red conglomerate,* which at some places crops out in the beds of the creeks, and in others forms lofty hills, as at Myall Hills, the Dividing Range, and the foot of the Tyraman. It alternates often with pudding stone, often with boulders of extraordinary size, at Pooyowaygan, in the bed of Glendonbrook, at the Tyraman, at St. Clair, at Falbrook, and at Carrow Brook. Whether this rock is identical with the pudding and sandstone, or whether it became at a later date deposited in the valleys as detritus of the primitive rocks I have not been able to determine. It contains boulders of porphyry. I have not been fortunate enough to discover, indeed, anywhere else such numerous boulders as on the Hunter.

The surface of this district is covered with diluvial drift pebbles. They show at different places a different character. Sometimes granitic pebbles are very frequent. Quartzites often occur. The banks of the creeks are formed of a rich thick alluvium; sand and brickclay mixed. The clayey nature of the ground becomes indeed in continued rainy weather often apparent to the weary traveller. As to mineral substances, I found a seam of gypsum in the red conglomerate of the Myall hill, and calcaspar at the eastern foot of Tyraman.

So soon as one descends the other side of Tyraman, and the dividing range to the Paterson, sandstone and pudding again immediately appear.

* This red conglomerate I have found extensively distributed elsewhere among the members of the lower marine beds of the carboniferous formation. It is evidently derived from porphyry, which must have been disintegrated long before the time of the upper coal measures.—W. B. C.

The Paterson carries basalt boulders. Between the Paterson and Allyn rivers, on the road to Messrs. Durbin and Way's, occur frequent traces of shells, in a blue, hard, clayey, sandy rock, and similar in character to the zoophyte limestone in Bell's Creek. The same rock without shells, yet with impressions of a water plant, I found beneath Messrs. Durbin and Way's garden, in the bed, and in the banks of the Allyn River, which also carries basaltic boulders. Several miles farther on occurs limestone, which very much resembles the rock before mentioned, containing many quartz grains and clay, but appearing more crystalline. This rock I observed also in the basin of Glendonbrook, at the foot of the northern range below Passye. At Stanhope, on the south side towards the Hunter, are found large masses of a fine white crystalline limestone, in a red brick clay, which remind us again of the layer of limestone nodules and calcareous tufa of Black Creek.

Mr. Wyndham told me that he observed a dyke probably of a basaltic rock, on the south side of the Tangorin. This mountain and Meranni are interesting to the geologist on account of the change of their rocks. On the tops of both appear the above-mentioned syenitic rock. The slopes of both are covered with sandstone and conglomerate. I have already mentioned that a bar or dam of porphyry ascends the Tangorin, in proximity to which its quartz crystals increase. From the Meranni also comes a dam-like range of hills down to Glendonbrook, consisting of a fine bluish and reddish dioritic rock, composed of feldspar and awgite. At the foot of Meranni, towards Reedy Creek, may be seen at one spot in the creek, the syenitic rock of the top; higher up the red conglomerate; then a kind of Wacke; then sandstone, and after this a high ledge of pudding stone, which can be seen stretching far onward along the whole range of Meranni. The rock of the summit I have already mentioned. At the east and west side of the Meranni there are found wide cavernous places in sandstone and pudding stone, in which occur numerous stalactites. On following the Meranni range, an opportunity is afforded for observing the igneous rocks upon the pudding stone and conglomerate, which are altered to a fine hard rock as if permeated by silica.

On the road from Glendon to Mount Royal—a southern spur of the Liverpool Range, which, at its southern termination, appears like an obtuse cone—one travels at first through a district filled with medium-sized hills, where two ranges occur which cannot be overlooked, and which obstruct a distant view in consequence of the universal growth of the forest. Porphyries several times break through the sandstones, and compel even the attention of common observers by the loose aggregation of pointed rocks. The valley of the Falbrook is surrounded by higher mountain ranges, in which everywhere pudding-stone crops out. Mr. Glennie found coal at the Falbrook. Between Mr. Bundock's and Captain Mayne's (St. Clair), the syenites of Meranni occur several times, especially at the junction of two creeks close in front of Captain Mayne's house. The bottom of the valley and the low hills, on one of which the dwelling-houses are erected, are all formed of red conglomerate; whilst the higher mountains, Balbock and Dyring, consist of sandstone and pudding-stone. Dyring is similar in constitution to Meranni. The same syenite occurs at the foot of this mountain, and, higher up, a pudding silicified by the influence of igneous rocks. Afterwards, not only sandstones and syenite alternate, but porphyry seems to have broken through these rocks. The summit consists of pudding-stone, forming below the top a vertical wall. About four miles from St. Clair, higher up, appear beds of a sandy and clayey limestone, full of great encrinital stems, the largest of which are nine lines and perhaps an inch in diameter, and of which some are compressed. Sandstone fragments lying about on the ground show that this encrinital limestone occurs immediately below the sandstone.

Analogous with this, limestone occurs at Glennie's Stockyard, and even at the junction of Carrow Brook, below Jump-up Hill, a rock rich in fossils, which seems to form the higher layers of a slaty rock. It is a sandy, calcareous clay. No scales of mica can be seen. Above there are a number of beds, often with rhombic joints, the faces of which are coated with iron that permeates and binds them together. About 150 feet higher up the well-known sandstone again crops out. The same forms also the elongated mountain ridges called by the hunters Jump-up Hill, on account of its steep Northern slope. Besides encrinites one finds in the above rock, Terebratulæ and other bivalves and univalves. Traces of plants have also been found. Here I believe I have also seen a Trilobite; still, as I was not able to find the very small fossil again, I will only draw the attention of later observers to this place.* The beds dip very generally at an angle of 13 towards the East. After ascending several terrace-like ledges, all composed of sandstone, at the foot of the Piri, one recognises, by the luxurious vegetation, the black rich soil, the dark brownish rock, that we have left at last the sandstone, and stand upon another formation, which the hammer proves to be a dark brown basalt with Zeolite, Peridot and Titaniferous iron. This rock forms Piri, an elongated, narrow undulating mountain ridge, which like a broad wall rises from the sandstone base. It strikes from South to North, and is connected with Mount Royal by an only slightly interrupted wall, which continues in the same strike, but surpasses the Piri in height. Mount Royal is as already previously mentioned, connected with the Liverpool Range.

The highest crest of the Piri and the ridge rising to the broad top of Mount Royal become sometimes so narrow, that one is obliged to climb it as if it were a wall. At these points the rock shows evident inclination to prismatic structure. The columns are, however, more irregularly tabular, whilst the lower part of the mountain is formed of massive basalt cliffs, covered by thin soils; the top of Mount Royal itself consists of disconnected, often very regular, yet confusedly heaped masses of shattered prisms, between which much moisture remains, greatly favouring the growth of plants and trees. Thus is this rocky wilderness covered with a dense forest of bush, scrub and low trees, between which beautiful plants and especially ferns luxuriate. Up the trees twine creepers, and polypodiums; and Orchis species with airroots cover the stems. From the branches hang down long moss and lichencurls. The prevailing South-Easterly wind frequently gives rise in the morning to dense fogs and rain, which, of course, principally nourish the Eastern slopes, and thus, therefore, become the cause of the dense scrubs, which cover the Eastern slopes of the Piri and Mount Royal, whilst the dry Westerly winds allow, during the favorable season, at the West side only, a dense covering of grass.

On the road from Singleton to Ravensworth, one ascends a long hill, which is formed of a loose sandstone. On descending, one sees the ground covered with small shining iron pebbles, many of which show the impression of the well known ferns of the clay shales and iron nodules of Newcastle.* This sandstone is generally called ironstone, on account of its brownish colour and the contained iron, whilst the basalt is named whinstone.

I have already, when speaking of Ravensworth, mentioned the coal which

* I can confirm this statement, having obtained M'Coy's Brachymetopus from the vicinity.—W. B. C.

* It may be well to explain, that although the Newcastle beds may occur at wide intervals—the lower coal measures also occur. To which series the pebbles may belong is doubtful.—W. B. C.

not only occurs at the junction of the Fallbrook with the Hunter and in the banks of the Hunter; but, also at several places higher up in the bed of the creek. The mountains northward of Dr. Bowman's house contain a fine sandstone which was used for the buildings.

About nine or ten miles westward on entering the mountains near Dr. Bowman's, occur igneous rocks which strike across the elongated ranges of hills of the sandstone and pudding. The rock was, without exception, a Feldspar Porphyry with red matrix. Higher up, and especially round the dwelling of the inspector of sheepstations at Sandy Creek, was everywhere found the sandstone and red conglomerate, frequently very much hardened.

At the otherside of the Needles, two high rocky points (pointed cliffs) Mr. Macpherson drew my attention to a spring which seems to contain a small quantity of carbonate of lime.

About three miles from Sandy Creek, towards northeast, we came to the Rochel River, at which sandstone and higher up Feldspar Porphyry are extensively developed. In a ravine at the right hand side of the River is Calcsinter deposited in great abundance. The waters containing the carbonate of lime issue from the creeks of the Feldspar Porphyry, and as moss and grasses grow upon the moist rocky slopes, the Calcsinter is deposited over and thus petrifies them. Golden Mica was very frequent on pieces of Feldspar Porphyry exposed to the atmosphere and bush fires. Pebbles with shells* and pieces of basalt were very frequent in the whole creek bed. At the highest station below Stromolo, a very considerable mountain of perhaps 1800 feet in height, these pebbles become angular and numerous. They contain the same shells which I found about Carrowbrook. The lower half of the Stromolo consists of sandstone, the super-imposed flat cones are basalt, sometimes decomposed, and in this instance containing a white substance distributed in veins.

We thus find here the same conditions, which I already observed on my journey to Mount Royal. The sandstone and pudding were broken through as well by feldspar porphyries as also by a basaltic rock. The former appear in long ranges, the latter either as mountain ridges, connected with the Liverpool Range (as for instance Mounts Royal and Piri), or as isolated mountain tops, like Stromolo. In the deep valleys at the foot of both we find a clayey, sandy, often calcareous rock which generally encloses many shells. The coal, however, is absent in these sections, although it occurs everywhere as soon as we approach the middle of the basin of the Hunter.

At Gaul's Flat, above the Needles in Bowman's Creek, one observes a rocky bank, the upper vertical cliffs of which are formed of feldspar porphyry, which includes nodules and layers of talc. Below, appears a bank of a dark hard rock, without fossils, in nearly horizontal layers, which probably is a similar argillaceous rock, changed by the porphyry, as we observed it below the Stromolo. At a ravine in front of the Needles I found, on returning to Ravensworth, the porphyry full of pebbles. These pebbles are likewise porphyry, only darker.†

The road from Ravensworth to Bengalla leads across an undulating country covered with forest. Two miles below Bengalla, coal appears on the right hand side bank of the Hunter. The coal bed is horizontal, a thin somewhat curved seam of chitter is parted from this bed by slaty clay; numerous slaty clay beds with ferns lie above the chitter, and above these a series of clayey sandstone beds. In the river itself occur basalt boulders, hardened sandstone, some pudding pebbles and porphyry boulders with yellow feldspar crystals.

* These belong to the lowest marine beds of the carboniferous formation.—W. B. C.

† Even in the upper marine beds as well as here in the lowest series, pebbles of porphyry are abundant.—W. B. C.

The same red sandy ferruginous clay soil or loam which I found at Black Creek and Stanhope containing pieces of carbonate of lime, occurs here also with larger or smaller limestone concretions. At Allman's Sugar Loaf, north-westerly of Captain Scott's house, occurs several times an altered argillaceous rock forming the hill.

The road to Cassilis leads across the usual stiff sandy clay soils, through which a coarse sandstone frequently protrudes. About six miles west of Bettington's the road was covered with fragments of Therapsid which all showed impressions of ferns. These latter resemble those in the uppermost coal-layer in front of the Valley of Palms near Newcastle. Coal lies certainly below them, and a basaltic dyke has probably altered the rocks. Above these altered slate clays occurs everywhere coarse-grained sandstone.

When approaching the Wybong my attention was excited by conical hills. I ascended one of them and found everywhere puddingstone. This pudding contains here, as in all the other hills which I rode past, numerous small quartz pebbles. The atmosphere and the waters which once must have swept these hills, have excavated numerous cavities, and have nearly entirely devoured large masses of the hills. Such a hill appears thus from the foot to the top like wood gnawed into and perforated by insects. Often there lie in front of the very regular cone an elongated ledge, apparently formed of blocks heaped above each other; and yet they are not real blocks, but it is the eaten-into rock mass itself.

I have mentioned at several places the excavations in the pudding and sandstone. The Bangalorah Caves between Lake Macquarie and Tuggerah Beach Lake lie in a pudding with numerous very large pebbles. A deep crack crosses them by which the sea breaks on them with great vehemence. On the moisture gradually destroying the cement, the pebbles fall into the crack on to the floor of the cave, and the waves wash them out. At the Tangorin and the Meranni in the neighbourhood of Glendon, one sees the caves generally below the pudding in a loose clayey sandstone. Often we find stalactites in them, more frequently still efflorescing salts. These latter are either nitrate of potash or chloride of sodium, (common salt). The floor of these excavations is filled with dust, in which are visible the foot-prints and excrement of the kangaroos seeking shelter here, whilst on the roof numerous wasplike Hymenoptera build their mudnests, in which they hoard up paralysed spiders for the nourishment of the larvae. The dust is, however, so light, that strong winds sweep the floor clean. The excavations of the Wybong Mountains are in a pudding rich in quartz fragments. Still, as one finds the ground not even comparatively covered with quartz, and as the winds are not strong enough to sweep them out, and the rain waters do not enter sufficiently to wash them out, we must, for an explanation of these caves, look back to the times, when the hills themselves were exposed to the play of the waves, which gnawed them as it were in such a peculiar manner.

After passing the Wybong we approach a range which seems to offer no passage; however, the road suddenly turns and leads over a low spur into similar trough shaped valleys, which are all in connection with each other. Thus one crosses Dartbrook and several other deep creek beds, some with a rock-layer of pudding. They all carry basalt pebbles, and only these. At Gammon Plains the creek appears to have broken its way only through alluvium, and it resembles a regular canal. Similar, are the creeks at Mr. Hamilton's sheep station, and two miles this side Cassilis. The Casuarine, which we find nearly every where along the creeks and rivers of New Holland are here absent.

I was told, that there existed at Gammon Plains a spring containing carbonic acid. I was also shown hard pieces of a travertine, which likewise came from this district. After having crossed Gammon Creek and ridden over a spur composed of sandstone, we reach a level, the black soil of which is strewn over with angular pieces of basalt. A small breast-like elevation indicates the commencement of the new formation. The forest is very thin, nearly exclusively formed of box and eucalyptus. Now and then appears a Sterculia with its fresh green foliage. Even young box saplings are absent. These slightly undulating plains are basalt fields, which come down from the Liverpool Range. They are sometimes interrupted by sandstone, and this is indicated by a yellow loamy or sandy soil. On descending in front of Colaroy towards the creek, we see rounded bulging capes, which appear to form the boundaries of the basalt field. The same rock occurs from Gammon Plains to Dalkeith and the Liverpool Range, across which a road leads to the Liverpool Plains.

At Dalkeith, close in front of the house near the creek, the basalt is in regular prisms. Following the creek from the house at Dalkeith downward, at the left, medium sized hills covered with black soil and angular pieces of basalt are seen. In a reservoir-like hollow is a layer of travertine, very impure, and about three feet thick. Farther downward, appear in the creek bed a loose sandstone and layer pieces of travertine with Limnæa and Paludina.

Here, as everywhere on basaltic soil, occur the deep furrows, which closely resemble cultivated land, and which the blacks call Dibbel-dibbel-land. The aborigines ascribe to the "devil devil" everything, of which their sharp senses are not able to directly divine the cause. This surface formation is very frequent in the loose black soil, with and without limestone concretions, on slight slopes and even in nearly perfect plains.

The furrows run all towards the valley, sometimes in a very oblique direction. I shall, further on, mention localities in which it becomes perfectly clear, that the streaming down rainwaters are the cause of this formation.

The quarry which yielded a fine building sandstone at Dalkeith lies a little farther down the creek, where Mr. Scott's property adjoins Crown land. It is a white, fine, or rather coarse sandstone, easily workable, which hardens in the air. Above it, at a little rise, lies a pudding stone rich in quartz; the pebbles are small, and consist of milky quartz and common quartzite. One observes in the same very distinct traces of bivalve shells. The sandstone is said to continue to the Goulburn.

I travelled up the Four Mile Creek. At one spot in the steep creek bank, a piece of the size of a man's fist of fine yellow oxide of lead is said to have been found. This high creek bank was formed of a very decomposed Amygdaloid, which included oval grains of a white stellar radiated crystalline substance (? Mesotype). Above this Amygdaloid lay alluvium with sharp pieces of basalt and travertine, the latter often coloured yellow by iron. Out of this alluvium it is now said that rainshowers have washed the lead ore. I have not found anything similar elsewhere. Farther upwards basalt crops out, very much decomposed. In the creek occurs tufa. The opposite creek bank is a plain covered with black soil, which shows the "Devil-devil land" very finely. Below the garden, are amygdaloids, full of elongated irregular cells, which are partly filled with a greenish yellowish substance, easily cut with a knife, partly with transparent crystals pointed at both ends. The cement is red, and very ferruginous, with small crystals. It is decomposed a foot deep, and allows the cutting with a knife even still deeper. A little lower downward, at the surface, the rock is very rich in yellow iron ochre, with which the natives paint themselves yellow.

On my journey to Binnigelleroi, a station of Mr. Scott's at the Talbragar,

I visited first Rock Creek, where a well has been dug. There has been dug out a wacke with goldshining decomposed crystals. In the creek is everywhere travertine. After this I crossed the Dividing Range, between the eastern and western waters, as the Four Mile Creek conducts its waters to the Goulburn and the Hunter, the Talbragar to the Macquarie and the Darling. This water-parting, which connects the Liverpool Range with the Blue Mountains is basaltic and very low. Its top forms a perfect plain. The valley of the Talbragar is shallow, with very gently rising slopes, resembling wide-ploughed fields. The well at Binnigelliroi is thirty-two feet deep.

The springs which occur not very far from this station are geologically in a very interesting locality. In a little ravine crops out a soft coarse-grained sandstone. It forms a steep slope from which falls during continuous rains a fine waterfall. From this slope constantly drip waters containing carbonate of lime. They form stalactites and stalagmites, and whilst mosses overgrow the moist faces and points of these lime deposits, and the lime on its part incrusts these mosses, one observes the formation of strangely shaped petrified masses of moss, which preserve the form of the moss often very accurately. Besides the mosses occur fresh water sponges, which undergo the same process of petrification. There are also in the creeks of the sandstone manifold shales formed of pure carbonate of lime. On ascending the ravine from above this cliff, we notice the basalt with prismatic columns, and in loose pieces above the sandstone. Between both is a wacke like rock, probably decomposed basalt, with fragments covering the sandstone. The left side of the ravine is formed of basalt.

I have never since observed the superposition of the basalt above sandstone in such perfection, because generally the places of contact are covered with earth and vegetation. This locality might therefore be for later geologists always of great interest.

The banks of the Talbragar, along which I rode to Rotherwood, are here also surrounded by plains which have probably formerly formed a sea bottom. On ascending Norfolk Island Creek and approaching the foot of the Liverpool Range, I found in the rocky bank of a waterhole the amygdaloidal rock of Dalkeith with radiated zeolites and hairlike crystals cropping out and very dense. It appears everywhere in the ravines and watercuts on ascending the range, and I had opportunity of observing it in the neighbourhood of Mr. Mawson's sheep station on the Liverpool Range, from all sides downwards.

The Liverpool Range forms a perfect plain here about three miles broad. Near the top the slopes are generally very steep and formed of loose sharp basalt, which under the footsteps roll downward. These flat tops which I have already previously mentioned, in the district of Dalkeith, I found here again, and over the whole colony they are peculiar to the basaltic formation. Perhaps the basaltic masses came up under a great pressure of water, and thus were flattened at the top.

The dividing range between the western and the eastern waters, between the Talbragar and the Macquarie on the one part, and the Munnmurra and the Goulburn on the other, is only a southern branch of the real Liverpool Range, which strikes from E. to W., and runs out and ends cape-like in the plain of the Barwon.

I frequently found, below and on the top, springs which were all accompanied by deposits of carbonate of lime. These waters contained, however, probably also several other salts, perhaps magnesia, since I was frequently exposed to diarrhoea as soon as I entered the district of the basalt, from which the sandstone district liberated me always directly. This observation was also not individual. It was, for instance, told me at Dalkeith, that many of the young men had on their arrival suffered from the use of the water, and that their constitutions became only gradually accustomed to it.

The slopes of the Chain towards the north, to the springs of Bowen Creek, were steeper than those southward towards Norfolk Island Creek. I followed the creek for several miles downward in company of Mr. Mawson, and rode afterwards across a range, at the right hand side, to Bayley's station. I observed here a red rock, which appeared to me to be decomposed basalt. It contained a white crystalline substance.

On several stations there are wells to be seen. Penetrating the loam, they came to basalt boulders, but did not reach any water, as, for instance, at Wyndham's station at a depth of thirty feet. Mr. Mawson has dug several wells. He found below the clay bottom hard lime, but deposited like that at Black Creek near the Hunter. In the lime layer he found fragments of reeds and a fresh water shell. Mr. Clarke told me that on the digging of wells in Liverpool Plains shells had often been found and bones of marsupials. Water is found sometimes at a depth of twenty-five feet, and in such abundance that the wells fill up to ten feet. In another well is found brackish water which however becomes sweet by use. The above layer of travertine was observed in a watercut close below the surface near Wiseman's station. In another well, Mr. Mawson found saline water. He had another dug, about fifty yards further in the plain, in which the water was fresh. On a third station a red clay was sunk through, which contained small decomposed pebbles and lime. On the farthest station he was obliged to bore through the sandstone, below which he came upon sandy clay shales with worn indistinct impressions of leaves and white mica scales. From out of this rock the water issues but slightly, and is of a saline quality. Probably further down are coal and fresh water. Below the myall bushes the water appears always to be a little saline.

Every one who sees these plains must involuntarily be struck with the idea that they formerly formed the bottom of lakes, from which the conical hills, as Moredevil, and mountain ranges as Collyblue and many others, protruded as islands. They rise isolated from a nearly horizontal plain. The "devil devil" land is here in its greatest perfection. We find the rises to consist of a light yellowish soil, in which innumerable rats have dug their burrows, and into which the horses sank deeply. The hollows show a deep clay bottom. Sometimes the furrows are regular for a great distance, sometimes they form a round or irregular disconnected troughs. The rider has to mind deep holes which have probably been formed by the rats.

The mountains of Collyblue are southerly and easterly composed of a coarse soft sandstone of broken quartz grains. Towards north again occurs basalt. The quartz grains falling out of the sandstone were washed gradually to the ground by the sea and rain waters. The mountains are therefore fringed by a zone of sand from one to two miles broad, whilst at other places where the sandstone rocks protrude just above the surface of the ground, island-like (insulated) layers of sand are spread out. As far now as these sands reach so far extends the tree vegetation. It commences at the extreme boundaries and rises up to the tops of the mountains. From high points which allow an extensive view over the plain, one sees partly forest grown and naked mountains and ranges partly insulated, mostly rounded or as oval forest islands, between which the real plains covered with grasses, with Composite and Leguminose plants are spread out. The soil of these plains is powdery during the dry season, in the wet season it is slippery and muddy. It contains a small portion of sand; on several places however are many lime concretions. Its chief constituents are clay and Humus.

With this formation of the surface are now probably connected the abundance of water and the depth of the wells. At the margin of the sand-layers water occurs everywhere at a proportionately small depth, viz.: twenty-five feet. In the middle of the plain the permanent water level lies probably considerably deeper.

On Blaxland's Mountain there is also a loose coarse grained sandstone, which is penetrated on the flat mountain top by a basaltic dyke, the same having spread towards South-East and East over the sandstone. The basalt is greyish, contains small yellowish masses of olivine, which appear on the decomposed faces. The beds of the sandstone are nearly horizontal, the one nearest the basalt was hardened. At the most distant sheep station of Collyblue spreads a basalt field over the sandstone, appearing like a high bank encircling a deep basin in the plain.

Mr. Mawson told me, that he found a piece of coal in a creek coming down from the Liverpool Range, about 30 miles from Collyblue. Such pieces of coal are said to have been observed likewise at the Namoi, and in New England. Similar observations in the district of the Darling Downs, which I shall have to mention further on, give a great probability to the occurrence of the coal below the sandstone of the Liverpool Plains. The sandstone shows the composition of many sandstones in the district of the Hunter, the same nearly horizontal bedding. Mr. Mawson gave me besides a piece of clayey sandstone or sandy clay shale with mica scales and black spots of fragmentary vegetable matter. It came from a well, and lies probably above the coal.*

On riding across the plain to the Mokai there rise everywhere along on the Western horizon isolated conical mountains and hills. Thus appear towards the South "More-devil," whilst to the North Breesi lies forward; and in the blue distance appears a third mountain mass of the same shape, with truncated top, which, as I already mentioned when speaking of the Liverpool Range, and as we so frequently observe it on Darling Downs and Beards Plains is a characteristic feature of the basalts.

The Mokai, like all Western rivers, has on entering the Wide Plains a deep bed cut out in alluvium, in which during the dry season the water entirely disappears, save in a few holes.

The drift in the bed of the Mokai, at the Larg's Station, consists of quartzose porphyry. Mount Breesi is basaltic. On approaching Carrol, vegetation changes with the soil. Whilst the plains of the Mokai were in wide expansion prominently covered by Chenopodiaceæ; there appeared with the rising of the ground myall bushes, and, at last the regular forest. Before arriving at Carrol, on the road from the Gwydir to the next station on the Peel, one passes over low rises of basaltic rock, covered with yellow soil. At the crossing place of the Peel, there is a considerable extent of puddingstone with porphyry pebbles. The box forest, from Mr. Howe's Station to Keepit, is generally covered with such fragments, probably derived from the puddingstone. This rock is undoubtedly in many places penetrated by basalt. About three miles from the Peel, at Howe's Station, there are a fine sand and a decomposed wacké-like rock. Further on the pebbles are feldspathic, and of a kind of pegmatite. Between Keepit and the Namoi appears for the first time a chonchoidally-fractured clayey rock of dark grey colour. It crops out everywhere in the bed of the Namoi, but contained where I saw it, no fossils. Its beds are horizontal. In the bed of the

* In parts of the Liverpool Plains patches of the various members of the carboniferous formation, including upper, middle, and lower, both fresh water and marine were seen by myself; and coal does occur in parts of the country bordering on the Gwydir.—W. E. C.

Namoi, about three miles this side the crossing place on the road to the Gwydir, this rock is broken through by a broad dyke of igneous rock. This dam forks and encloses in its fork, the same rock, only very much hardened. I saw iron pyrites in this enclosed portion. The strike of the dyke is W.N.W. and E.S.E. It contains many micascals. The dyke appears to dip a little to the South. Thick alluvium covers the rock, and forms the bank. It is a rich, yellow loam. In the river bed occurred many quartz fragments, several resembled jasper, of a fine red with white veins.

This argillaceous rock of the Namoi appears in nearly all the ravines along the road to the Manilla River. Upon it rests a loose coarse sandstone, which upward changes into pudding-stone, with porphyry fragments, or probably gives place to this rock.

In the Manilla Creek, which runs through Uhr's and Huskisson's run, as well as in the Manilla River, at Ogilvie's, the cleaved argillaceous rock every where appears in regular nearly horizontal stratification. In the Manilla Creek it is frequently traversed by carbonate of lime. Frequently it is, probably in the neighbourhood of igneous rocks, altered to a kind of hornstone. In the pebbles of this rock in Huskisson's Creek, I found the impression of a plant resembling Lycopodium, and in the ravines of the Manilla river, in the neighbourhood of Mr. Ogilvie's station, occurs frequently Lepidodendron in fine impressions.

On the northern bank of the Manilla Creek, opposite Mr. Huskisson's house, crops out a porphyry with feldspar crystals in a bluish matrix. The range runs N.S. The creek bends round the southern foot, and several springs exist at the level of the creek. Southward from Ogilvie's station, at the Manilla River, an igneous feldspathic rock (Domite) has penetrated the cleaved argillaceous rock. In the creek in front of the house are frequently porphyry pebbles. The argillaceous rock yields fine grinding stones at those places where, by the influence of igneous rocks, it became hardened. I found very large flags of fine grain; they appear to me, however, too hard. They give a fine sound on being lifted and beaten with the hammer, and resemble also externally tabular Phonolite, from which they are, under any circumstances, very different, because one can clearly observe the transition into the stratified argillaceous rock with irregular conchoidal jointing.

In a little ravine below the stockyard lime tufa occurs, which not only covers the walls of the ravine, but has also incrusts the pebbles. Besides these there is an extensive layer of pipeclay.

On following the river downward we see the hard hornstone covered by a clayey sandstone, which appears in the surrounding mountains as pudding stone and conglomerate. Still lower down the river, where the slaty rock was probably outside of the influence of the igneous rock to the south, it is earthy and again irregularly jointed. The beds dip at an angle of 8 degrees towards west; in the creek the angle is 20 degrees. In this rock lie here irregular, often lenticular masses of a finer grain.

In the ravines between Ogilvie's and Bundock's run, and towards the district of the Gwydir, these beds are irregularly bent and twisted, and the rock itself is covered by Trachytes and Phonolites.

The Manilla River and the Gwydir run entirely through this dry rock formation. Mr. Stoney found similar impressions of Lepidodendron at Eulowrie, a station of Mr. Pringle's on the Gwydir; and I found on Mr. Otley's station at the Gwydir encrinite stems and bivalve shells, which remind one of the rock at Carrowbrook and Fallbrook; of the beds below Passye on Glendon Estate, and of the sandy argillaceous rock of the Paterson, and probably connect the formation of the Gwydir itself with the limestone of the Williams River and Port Stephens.

Mr. Rusden told me that real limestone occurred about 40 miles from the Gwydir on Brown's station.*

From the Manilla River I ascended to the springs of the Gwydir, which one finds in a basin-shaped valley, lying between the tops of adjoining trachytic and phonolitic mountains. The bottom of the valley is formed of a layer of clay, above which rests at the creek the rich loose black soil, which everywhere accompanies igneous rocks. At the exit of the Gwydir from the valley a conglomerate appears, permeated or altered by porphyries, similar to the pebble-containing porphyry in front of the Needles at Ravensworth. At the foot of the hills on which lies Mr. Rusden's house we find a phonolitic rock, with a homogeneous feldspathic base without crystals, which in other localities are so abundant as to form the finest trachytic porphyry. Above this reposes a conglomerate with small components forming the first terrace. Above this bulges out a small rise with loose sharp pieces of phonotite, and behind a considerable mountain mass is formed of the same rock. It appears as if the conglomerate, which is surrounded by igneous rocks, was raised by these to its present position.

Westward of Mr. Rusden's house stretches a mountain chain from north to south, which forms a steep bold rocky wall at the highest end of the valley. In front of the mountains occurs porphyry-conglomerate, sometimes with pebbles, sometimes without, but with flesh coloured feldspar crystals. Higher up appear phonolite and trachyte. This latter rock changes extraordinarily. Sometimes it shows a dense structure with few crystals; sometimes it is cellular, the cells covered with crystals; sometimes there lie in a cellular porous matrix many large feldspar crystals. In a saddle in front of the rock-wall it changes to a kind of domite, as we afterwards find frequently again. Bulging rises run easterly down to the valley, and appear like lava streams. Among these mountains, but particularly the north-western ones, we observe a sort of terrace formation, which is also indicative of a certain change of the rocks. The rock of the lowest terrace shows in an earthy ferruginous cement holding a few small feldspar crystals. Towards the top it becomes a cellular trachyte of grey colour full of crystals.

The second steep rise, covered with sharp fragments, consists of Augite and feldspar crystals in a grey and dark blue cement, and the uppermost agrees with the basaltic rock of the Liverpool Ranges.

Among the neighbouring heights there exist similar relations. Northward of the house at the second water, is a steep cliff in which the rock shows a prismatic structure.

The road from the high valley of the Gwydir springs to Bundock's and Mr. Otley's station, leads through a gap formed in phonolite. From this one descends a steep footpath to a creek which empties into the Gwydir over sandstone and pudding stone. Bundock's, Bell's, and Pringle's stations stretch principally over coarse sandstone, pudding-stone, and conglomerate, whilst below the latter, in deep ravines and watercuts, occurs the cleaved argillaceous rock traversed by veins of calcspar. This is shown clearly by a section extending from the house on Mr. Bell's station to the opposite mountains.

On Otley's station, at the Gwydir, one finds on going to the eastern mountains in the river bank and in all creeks the known cleaved argillaceous rock which, in many places, is covered by layers of carbonate of lime and marly concretions.

* The whole series of beds of the carboniferous formation were found by me in the district here mentioned; and I do not doubt that the connection pointed out in the text is perfectly correct. At Pallal, not far from Eulowrie, the marine beds are well exposed, also near Warialda.—W. B. C.

At a small distance from the mountains I found a hard rock of clay slate colour, containing many encrinite stems and bivalve shells. It effervesces slightly with acetic acid. This rock differs from the argillaceous rock of the plain and the hill only in the number of its fossils, which have probably imparted to it a proportion of lime and hardness. The rock of the hill is much more sandy. The northern termination of the mountain range consists of porous trachyte.

In a ravine on the eastern side lime tufa is deposited. The eastern flanks of the range were covered with white quartz fragments. The ranges westward of Mr. Otley's house were all formed of sandstone and pudding-stone.

Rocky Creek, a station of Mr. Pringle, and a creek which empties into the Gwydir show little new in the lower part of the valley. In the pudding stone below the stockyard occur a large number of granite pebbles nearly wholly of feldspar and mica.

The pudding stone changes into sandstone, which forms the mountains northwesterly of the house. Upon the highest mountain I observed a quartz lode eighteen inches broad, and traversed by quartz veins of an inch thick. The lode strikes N. 60° E., S. 60° W. Five feet eastward parallel with it is another quartz vein. The mountain is nearly one thousand feet high, and offers a fine view over the whole valley of Rocky Creek and the southern tops of the Nundawar Range. This country, with wide flat-bottomed valleys, appears likewise to have formed sea basins, whose water has run off through frequently very narrow breaks.

Westward and higher up the valley expands, and here rise from the entirely level bottom, masses of trachytic rock which sometimes appear as pointed sharp cones, yet all are a little elongated. Some contain Domite without feldspar crystals, like that of Puy de Dome. The others are rich in feldspar crystals, and sometimes contain small globules of peroxide of iron.

These mountains of the plain are connected with the western mountain masses, the tops of which form peculiarly bold figures in undoubted relation on account of their not only striking in the same direction, but also showing in the whole the same character of rock. These mountains, at least the three or four most important ones, strike from S.E. to N.W. You can ride round them on a perfect level plain. They are at least 900 feet high. From the Barwon, which lies nearest to the western mountains, runs a rock wall to the castellated mountain (Mount Riddel) so called on account of its steeple or castle like shape. It rises in steep steps to perhaps 1500 feet above these plains. From the summit one enjoys a very extended view southerly over the valley; northerly over the wide plains through which the Big River (Gwydir) winds its way. These plains appeared at the time as yellow, as the grasses by which they were covered were ripe. Still between the yellow grass fields stretched dark shadows, and these were the myall brushes whose herbs and shrubs impart to the runs of the Big River such extraordinary fattening qualities. Towards the west rises a mountain mass which surpasses even Mount Riddel or the Castle in height. Perpendicular rock walls formed steep ledges 300 feet high on the western side of the Castle. On the opposite mountain was such a step visible along the whole eastern side, it seemed however less lofty. Several valleys descended northward down to the Big River.*

The Stockyard or Nobby is a high rock of whitish trachyte with blackish

* Much of this district has been since described in Rev. W.B. Clarke's Report, 7th May, 1858, also in Mr. Stutchbury's Reports of 1st July and 1st October, 1853. Notice of Nundawar may be found in Mitchell's Eastern Australia, vol. i.—W.B.C.

specks without crystals. Calcareous waters permeate through the clefts and form small concretions. Here a vertical wall formed the boundary of a solitary valley, the creek of which carried boulders and pebbles of conglomerate and violet coloured trachyte. I mention the steep rock walls because they exhibit a character peculiar to the Domites, in consequence of which the mountains formed of the latter appear generally in bold abrupt forms, by which also their composition is already at large distances indicated. Mount Greville, Mount Edwards, Cameron's Range, Flinder's Range, the Glass-houses in the Moreton Bay District belong all to this formation, and I have already when speaking of the springs of the Gwydir mentioned the high steep rock wall, behind which one sees from Mr. Rusden's house the setting sun. The Mokai, the Namoi, the Peel, the Manilla, and the Gwydir, all run West and South-West to the Barwon or Darling.

New South Wales.

THIS name was originally given to the whole of the eastern division of Australia by its first explorer Captain Cook, who, when examining the coast on his first voyage in 1770, thought it resembled that of South Wales. Its territory originally embraced all the country from Cape York, in the latitude of $10^{\circ} 37'$ south, to South Cape, in the latitude of $43^{\circ} 29'$ south, including the adjacent islands in the Pacific Ocean within the latitude above mentioned, and inland to the westward as far as the 135° of east longitude. Since the foundation of South Australia on 26th December, 1836, and the separation of the colonies of Victoria and Queensland—the former of which was declared independent on the 13th of January, 1851, and the latter on the 10th of December, 1859, the territory of New South Wales is limited to the country between the parallels of 28° and 37° south latitude, and between the 141st and 154th meridians of east longitude, being bounded on the north by Queensland, on the south by Victoria, on the west by the interior territory of South Australia, and on the east by the Pacific Ocean.

The greatest length of New South Wales is 900 miles, and is measured on a line drawn from Point Danger to the point where the meridian of 141° E. intersects the course of the Murray River; but the average length does not exceed 500 miles. The extreme breadth measured from Cape Howe to the point of intersection of the parallel of 29° S., with the 141st meridian, is less than 850 miles, and the average breadth is about 500 miles. New South Wales is supposed to contain an area of about 325,000 square miles.

The first governor of New South Wales was ARTHUR PHILLIP, R.N., who arrived at Botany Bay in H.M.S. Sirius, along with three storeships and six transports, on the 20th January, 1788, where they anchored, and finding that Botany Bay was not a suitable place for the new settlement, proceeded to examine Port Jackson.

On the 26th of January 1788, the British ensign was, for the first time, hoisted on the solitary shores of Sydney Cove, now the seat of Government and capital of New South Wales.

The city of Sydney, the capital of New South Wales, is situated in the county of Cumberland, in $33^{\circ} 55'$ south latitude, and $151^{\circ} 25'$ east longitude, and stands at the head of Port Jackson, about six miles from its entrance. Its population, including the suburbs, at the last census, was 93,686. The principal other towns of the colony, with their population, government officials, &c., will be found under the heading of "Country Directory."

The following is a list of the Governors of New South Wales, showing the date on which they assumed and retired from the Government :—

The first Parliament under Responsible Government was opened for the dispatch of business on the 22nd of May, 1856.

The following table shows the number of Parliaments since the establishment of Responsible Government, when opened for dispatch of business, and dissolution of same: also, the number of sessions in each Parliament :—

FIRST PARLIAMENT.

Opened, 22nd May, 1856.—Dissolved, 19th December, 1857.

Session 1.—(1856-7).—22nd May, 1856, to 18th March, 1857.

Session 2.—(1857).—11th August, 1857, to 18th December, 1857.

SECOND PARLIAMENT.

Opened, 23rd March, 1858.—Dissolved, 11th April, 1859.

Session 1.—(1858).—23rd March, 1858, to 26th November, 1858.

Session 2.—(1858-9).—8th December, 1858, to 9th April, 1859.

THIRD PARLIAMENT.

Opened, 30th August, 1859.—Dissolved, 10th November, 1860.

Session 1.—(1859-60).—30th August, 1859, to 4th July, 1860.

Session 2.—(1860).—25th September, 1860, to 8th November, 1860.

FOURTH PARLIAMENT.

Opened 10th January, 1861.. Dissolved 10th November, 1864.

Session 1.—(1861.)—10th January, 1861, to 11th May, 1861.

Session 2.—(1861-2.)—3rd September 1861, to 20th January, 1862.

Session 3.—(1862.)—27th May, 1862, to 20th December, 1862.

Session 4.—(1863-4.)—23rd June, 1863, to 22nd April, 1864.

Session 5.—(1864.)—18th October, to 9th November, 1864.

FIFTH PARLIAMENT.

Opened 24th January, 1865.

Session 1.—(1865.)—24th January, to 21st June, 1865.

Session 2.—24th October, 1865.

The reduction in the year 1851 was caused by the separation of Port Phillip from New South Wales. The reduction in the year 1859 was caused by the separation of Queensland from New South Wales.

The quantity of Gold Dust or Bullion received into the Branch Royal Mint for coinage, since its opening on the 14th May, 1835, to 31st December, 1865, was 4,845,308 ozs.; and the issue of Australian Sovereigns and Half-sovereigns and Bullion amounted to $19,900,641.

Exemptions from Duty.—Articles of clerkship or apprenticeship; mortgages, bills of sale over chattel property; preferable liens or liens on crops; customs bonds and administration bonds. Also grants from the Crown and certificates of title from Registrar-General under Real Property Act.

Penalties.—The following particulars require careful attention in reference to the use of the above-named instruments. Any person issuing or paying a bill of exchange, promissory note, draft, or order, without a proper stamp, is liable to a penalty of £50. When an adhesive stamp is used for such an instrument, or for a bill of lading, policy of insurance, or receipt, the person signing or issuing the instrument must obliterate the stamp by writing his name or initials thereon, under a penalty of £10. The fraudulent removal or second use of a stamp incurs a penalty of £20. The holder of a foreign bill must, under a penalty of £50, affix the proper adhesive stamp to it before negotiating it, and write his name on the stamp. For drawing bills payable out of the colony, purporting to belong to sets, and not drawing the whole number, the penalty is £100. The person who pays a bill, draft, or order, must write "paid" on every stamp upon the instrument, or be liable to a penalty of £20.

The operation of the Stamp Duties Act is limited to three years and a half, namely, from 1st July, 1865, to 31st December, 1868.

POST OFFICE MONEY ORDERS are issued at Sydney on all the principal towns in the Colony, a list of which will be found under List of Post Towns. Also on the Colonies of Victoria, South Australia, Western Australia, Queensland, and New Zealand, and on the United Kingdom.

Adjacent Colonies	1 0	..	2 0
The United Kingdom	1 0	2 0	3 0	4 0

No Single Order to be granted for more than £10.

N.B.—No application can be entertained for compensation for alleged injury from the non-payment of a Money Order at the expected time. When a Money Order is applied for, it must be on the clear understanding that no such claim will be allowed, and that the Post Office is not liable under any circumstances to more than one payment of a Money Order, even when, notwithstanding the precautions that are taken, the Order has been paid to a person not entitled to receive the money.

REGULATIONS:

ADVICES MAY BE FORWARDED BY ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—Persons may have advices of Money Orders forwarded by Electric Telegraph to any place where Money Orders are payable, and to which communication by Electric Telegraph has been opened, upon making special application on the form provided for that purpose, and paying the charges for the transmission of messages by Electric Telegraph, in addition to the commission on the Money Orders obtained.

COST OF TRANSMISSION TO BE PAID BY SENDER.—Persons obtaining Money Orders will be required to forward them to the persons to whom they are made payable, and to pay all costs and charges for their transmission.

PAYABLE AT SIGHT.—Money Orders, upon being presented at the Post Office, at the place upon which they are drawn, will be payable at sight; but the Postmaster, or any other person acting in his behalf, will be allowed a reasonable time, before payment, to make any inquiry he may deem necessary, to establish the identity of the person presenting the order with the payee, as advised.

PERIOD OF CURRENCY.—No Money Order will be payable after a period of six months from the date of issue, and if a Money Order is not duly presented within the above time, it will become void.

MONEY ORDERS LOST, &c.—Should it be proved to the satisfaction of the Superintendent that a Money Order has been lost or destroyed, or that the person in whose favour a Money Order is drawn, has died, or cannot be found, the Superintendent may direct that the money be returned to the person who obtained the order.

FAILURE OF POSTMASTERS TO PAY ORDERS.—In case any Postmaster, on whom a Money Order is drawn, shall, from illness, want of funds, or any other cause, be unable or fail to pay the amount required, upon such order being presented, the Superintendent shall not be liable to be sued for on account of such inability or failure.

NON-LIABILITY OF SUPERINTENDENT.—The Superintendent shall not be liable for any claim whatsoever in respect to any Money Order that has been presented and paid.

POST OFFICE ARRANGEMENTS.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

1. All letters, &c., posted in New South Wales must be pre-paid, by affixing thereon Stamps of sufficient value. Every letter wholly unstamped will be opened, and returned to the writer.
2. Letters insufficiently stamped, if for any colony or Foreign country, will be dealt with in like manner.
3. Inland letters, if the postage on them be not grossly deficient, are forwarded; but charged double the amount of deficient postage.
4. Letters for the United Kingdom, if stamped with not less than a single rate of postage, are forwarded; but charged with the postage deficient, and a further single rate as a fine.
5. Every British letter not so stamped, and every Inland letter grossly deficient in stamps, will be opened and returned to the writer.
6. Letters from beyond sea, not regularly posted at the place of despatch, are charged with Sea Rates of postage. If duly posted, no colonial charge whatever is made.
7. Letters sent overland to any of the adjacent colonies are charged the same rates of postage as if sent by sea.
8. Letters, on being re-directed, are chargeable with a new and distinct rate of postage.
9. Any person can have a letter registered, by affixing on it a sixpenny register stamp, (or more, if to any foreign country or to certain colonies,) in addition to the proper postage, and presenting it at the Registry Department between 10 A.M. and 3.30 P.M.
10. Letters for despatch from the General Post Office must be posted as follows:—For the Western and Southern Districts by 4 P.M. For the Northern Districts by 5.30 P.M.; or, by Supplemental Mail for the Steamboats by 7.30 P.M. For despatch to a Suburban Office, by 8.30 A.M. For despatch by Coasters, half-an-hour before the advertised departure.
11. Letters must be posted, at every Post Office in the colony, half-an-hour before the time fixed for despatch thence of the mail. Late letters are not despatched till the mail next following.

12. Private Letter Boxes are provided, and letters, &c., delivered at a separate window, on payment of Two Guineas per annum; or at that rate half-yearly, or quarterly.

13. The Delivery Office in Sydney is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Dead Letter Office, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Sale of Stamps Room from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

14. The country offices are open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. But where mails arrive later, the Office is open for half-an-hour (not in any case beyond 8 p.m.) after such arrival. One hour's recess is allowed, about noon, daily. Every office is open one hour on Sundays.

15. Letters and Newspapers to or through the United Kingdom, unless marked for transmission otherwise, are forwarded by the usual monthly steamers.

NEWSPAPERS.

16. Newspapers, for transmission from the General Post Office, by the ordinary morning mails, must be posted there before 8 a.m.; and by the afternoon mails, before 4 p.m.

17. Every newspaper whatever, posted in the colony, for transmission inland or beyond sea, is at present subject to a charge of one penny.

18. Newspapers for the United Kingdom, via Southampton are charged one penny only; but threepence, if by way of Marseilles.

19. Newspapers for any Colony or Foreign Country, sent through the United Kingdom, are charged various rates of postage. Of these, a table can be seen at the General Post office.

20. The Postage on Newspapers must be paid by affixing thereon, stamps of sufficient value. No newspaper unstamped, or insufficiently stamped, will be forwarded. Nor, if it has in or upon it any writing whatever, except only the direction on the outside thereof.

21. Newspapers posted out of the colony are delivered without further charge. But, when posted here, whether in monthly parts or otherwise, they are liable to the rate of one penny each number.

SYDNEY LETTERS.

22. The Sydney Letter Carriers deliver letters three times daily; the third time, however, only in the more business parts of the city. They start from the General Post Office at 9 a.m., 1 p.m., and 4 p.m. In the Suburbs there are two deliveries daily, with the exception of St. Leonard's.

23. Letters for these deliveries must be posted at the General Post Office half-an-hour before the hours named respectively; or, if in an Iron Receiver, before the time specified on such Receiver.

THE P. AND O. MONTHLY MAILS.

24. These are usually made up at the General Post Office, on the morning of the 24th of each month. Letters for the United Kingdom and Galle at 11; but all other Letters at 10. (Newspapers, one hour previously—in each case), Letters and Newspapers via Marseilles or Trieste, must be so marked. The latest hour for posting Letters, or Newspapers, in any Iron Receiver, is 7 a.m.

25. Registered Letters must be posted the day previous; excepting for the United Kingdom—in which case they may be posted on the 24th, before 10 o'clock.

26. Letters via Marseilles can generally be posted, either at Moore's Wharf, or the General Post Office, as late as one o'clock; on payment of a late fee of 6d. in addition to all other rates.

27. Sealing wax should never be used for European or Indian Letters; but gum or wafers only.

BOOK PACKETS.

1. No packet shall exceed two feet in length, breadth, or width; or three pounds in weight.

2. With the above limitations, a packet may contain any number of separate books, maps, or prints, and any quantity of paper or parchment.

3. Every packet, except as hereinafter mentioned, must be sent open at the ends; either without a cover, or in a cover open at the ends. There must be no letter, closed or open, (nor any thing whatever closed), sent in any such packet; nor any communication in the nature of a letter, whether written or printed on the cover.

4. The name and address of the sender may appear on the cover, as well as those of the party addressed; but this is not indispensable.

5. Every packet posted unpaid, or stamped with less than a single rate, or exceeding the prescribed dimensions or weight, or being in any other respect in violation of these Rules, or which shall by reason of its form or contents be likely to injure other packets or letters, will be returned to the sender, or (if he be unknown) will be destroyed.

6. Every packet posted insufficiently paid, but having at least a single rate thereon, will be forwarded; but be charged with the deficient postage, and a further single rate as a fine.

7. Every letter, sealed or open, found in any packet, will be charged with postage as an unpaid letter; and the sender will be liable to prosecution for the offence.

8. The undermentioned articles may be transmitted as book packets, viz.:—All publications, literary or musical; books, printed, written, or plain; photographs on paper; printed circulars of every description, and other publications or compilations, printed or in manuscript; almanacs, prints, drawings, and maps; with any binding or covering belonging to the article, and any case or thing usually appertaining to it, or necessary for its safe transmission.

9. All the above rules apply equally to Trade Patterns to the United Kingdom with this addition, that they must not be in themselves saleable, or of any intrinsic value; or other than patterns, simply and exclusively.

10. Pass Books, sent by or to any Bank or Banker; Maps or Plans, sent by or to the Surveyor-General, and returns from or to any Department of the Public Service, pursuant to any Law or Official Regulation, not exceeding sixteen ounces in weight respectively, will be forwarded, closed; provided they bear outside a statement of the contents, with the sender's name and address, subscribed by him. In all other respects, they are subject to the same rules as open book packets.

11. Returns of Births, Baptisms, Marriages, and Deaths, may be transmitted unstamped, the postage to be paid on delivery, if marked as containing such Returns only, and signed by the Clergyman or Registrar transmitting them.

12. Packets open at each end containing Printed Reports of the Proceedings of any Religious or Charitable Institution, posted in any city or town, for delivery within the same, are charged as follows:—

	s.	d.
Not exceeding 4 ozs.	-	0 1
Every additional 2 ozs. or part of 2 ozs.	-	0 1

13. Petitions or Addresses to the Queen, the Governor, or either House of Parliament, sent to any member of either House, are—if open at each end, and not above thirty-two ounces in weight—wholly exempted from postage.

ENGLISH MAILS.

VIA SUEZ.

The Overland Mail, via Suez, leaves Sydney, on the 24th, Melbourne on the 28th, King George's Sound five days after, arriving at London via Marseilles, on or about the 14th; and at Southampton on or about the 20th.

The Return Monthly Mail leaves Southampton on the 20th of each month, and Marseilles on the 26th. Arrives at King George's Sound about the 5th of the month; at Melbourne on or about the 13th; and Sydney on or about the 16th of the month.

The Overland Mails for England close at the General Post Office on the day of the departure of the Mail, at the following hours:—

For ordinary letters addressed to the United Kingdom and Galle, at 11 a.m.; to other places than the United Kingdom, 10 a.m.

For Newspapers addressed to the United Kingdom, at 10 a.m.; to other places than the United Kingdom, at 8 a.m.

Letters and Newspapers may be posted in the Sydney Iron Receivers up to 7 a.m.

Registered letters addressed to the United Kingdom may be registered between the hours of 9 and 10 a.m.

Late letters addressed to the United Kingdom via Marseilles can be posted at the General Post Office, and at Moore's Wharf, up to 1 p.m. on the day of departure of the Mail. Such letters, however, will not be despatched unless they bear an extra sixpenny stamp as a late fee in addition to the ordinary postage.

Direct Mails are made up at the General Post Office for the following places—Melbourne, Tasmania, South Australia, Western Australia, Ceylon, Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Singapore, Penang, Manila, Batavia, Hong Kong, Aden, Mauritius, Re-Union, Natal, Cape of Good Hope, Suez, Austrian Post Office, Alexandria (enclosing correspondence for Trieste or marked via Trieste), Malta, Gibraltar, Marseilles, the travelling post office from Marseilles to Lyons, (enclosing correspondence for France and for the Travelling post via France), the United Kingdom via Marseilles and via Southampton.

VIA PANAMA.

The Mail via Panama leaves Sydney on the 1st of each month, arriving in London on or about the 29th of each month.

The Return Mails are made up in London on the 2nd of each month, and are due in Sydney on or about the last day of each month.

Direct mails are made up for the various Provinces of New Zealand; for Panama, in which is included correspondence to all parts of North and South America, British Columbia, Honolulu, and the West Indies; and for London, the Continent of Europe, the West Coast of Africa, the Cape of Good Hope, &c, REGULATIONS FOR THE ADMISSION OF INSANE PERSONS INTO THE LUNATIC ASYLUM.

The attention of persons applying for the admission into the Lunatic Asylum of persons of unsound mind, under the 11th section of the Act 7 Victoria No. 12, is requested to the provision contained in the Act 13 Victoria No. 3, that in cases where the insane person has no relative or guardian in the colony, or none accessible without inconvenient delay, any person or society under whose protection and care such insane person shall actually be, shall be deemed the guardian for the purposes of the first-mentioned enactment.

2. Every application of the above description must be from one of the relatives or guardians of the lunatic, in the form annexed (A), which must be sanctioned by one of the Judges of the Supreme Court. For this purpose the application must be taken (or sent) to the Prothonotary of the Court, or one of the Judge's Clerks.

3. A certificate must be attached to the petition in the form hereto annexed (B), signed by two legally qualified medical practitioners, stating that they have examined the person, and found him or her to be of unsound mind, and that they consider such person will be benefitted by treatment in the Lunatic Asylum.

4. In all applications of this nature, the relationship in which the applicant stands to the lunatic must be stated; but, in cases where the lunatic has no accessible relative or guardian, the application may proceed from the principal officer of any public charity, or the gaoler, or other person (master or friend), under whose actual protection and care the lunatic is: stating the fact, as the case may be.

5. The application, when sanctioned by one of the Judges, is to be forwarded to the Colonial Secretary.

6. The charge for the maintenance in the Lunatic Asylum of a lunatic, male or female, is two shillings and two-pence per diem; and, except in the case of a pauper, the person seeking the lunatic's admission will be required to furnish to the Visiting Justice of the Lunatic Asylum an engagement from two responsible persons for the regular payment of this sum.

7. If the application be for the admission of the lunatic as a pauper, a certificate will be required from some respectable person known to the Government, to the effect not only that such lunatic is without funds, but is also without friends who can reasonably be expected to maintain such lunatic.

(Form of Petition to His Excellency the Governor.)

To His Excellency The Right Honorable Sir John Young, K.O.B., G.C.H., Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief in and over Her Majesty's Territory of New South Wales, &c., &c. &c.

The Petition of (G.H.) of (state residence, and trade, or calling). Respectfully sheweth, that (A.B.) of (state residence, trade, or calling) has been examined and found to be of unsound mind, as will appear by the annexed certificate; and that your petitioner, who is the father, (or other relative or guardian,) of the said (A.B.) is desirous of procuring (his or her) admission into the Lunatic Asylum, in order that (he or she) may there have such medical care and attendance as may be most likely to ensure (his or her) eventual recovery. [If the petitioner be not a relative or guardian, say, instead of the words "who is the father," &c., as follows :—"who has the actual protection and care of the said A.B., and is therefore (his or her) guardian, under the 13 Vic. No. 3. sec. 2, is desirous," &c.]

(Add any circumstance requiring explanation, and whether the insane person is proposed to be maintained by the petitioner or by the public.)

Your petitioner therefore prays that your Excellency will be pleased to direct that the said (A. B.) may be received into such Lunatic Asylum as you Excellency may think fit to appoint.

Note.—If the insane person is sought to be admitted at the public cost, the following certificate should be added.

I, (J. K.) of (state residence, &c.,) do hereby certify, that to the best of my knowledge and belief (A. B.) who is described in the foregoing petition has not the means of paying for (his or her) maintenance in the Lunatic Asylum, and that (he or she) has not any relative or friend who can be reasonably expected to maintain (him or her.)

(Signed) (J. K.)

If the application proceeds from a near relative, such as a husband, father, &c., the certificate should be as follows :—

I, (J. K.,) of (state residence, &c.,) do hereby certify, that, to the best of my knowledge and belief, neither (G.H.) nor (A.B.) who are described in the foregoing petition, has the means of paying for the maintenance of (A.B.) in the Lunatic Asylum, and that (A.B.) has not any relative or friend who can be reasonably expected to maintain (him or her.)

(Signed) (J. K.)

(Form of Medical Certificate.)

We, the undersigned, being legally qualified Medical Practitioners, do hereby certify that we have examined (A. B.) of (state residence, trade, or calling, &c.,) and that we find (him or her) to be of unsound mind, and a proper object for reception into the Lunatic Asylum; and we further certify, that in our opinion the said (A. B.) would be benefitted by treatment in such Asylum.

REGULATIONS FOR THE RECEIPT OF GOLD FOR COINAGE.

His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, has been pleased to frame and adopt the following Regulations for the receipt and coinage of Gold at the Sydney Branch of the Royal Mint,—such Regulations to take effect from the publication hereof, except as to Gold already imported into the Mint, in respect to which the charges in force before such publication shall be payable.

1. Importations of gold dust or gold bullion for coinage, from 12 ounces upwards, will be receivable at the Mint daily (Saturdays and holidays excepted), between the hours of 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

2. In addition to the charge of threepence per ounce, imposed by Her Majesty's Proclamation of the 3rd February, 1866, on the coinage of gold, there shall be paid for melting, assaying, and refining, the following charges, viz. :—

(1.) On undivided parcels containing not less than one thousand ounces standard (to be melted and assayed in one lot), at the rate of three-pence per ounce (standard).

(2.) On parcels containing less than one thousand ounces standard, at the rate of fivepence per ounce (standard).

3. The value of the bullion will be determined on the reports of the Mint Assayers.

4. The gold will be melted, if preferred, in the presence of the importer. The importer will also be furnished, on demand, with a clip for assay, from his own ingot, as a check on the reports of the Mint Assayers.

5. The Mint will be prepared to afford accommodation, to a limited extent, to parties requiring early payment for their bullion, at an advance of two-pence per ounce standard on the above charges. Payment in such cases will be made as follows, viz. :—

Gold received up to Wednesday evening in each week will be payable on the following Tuesday. Gold received after Wednesday will be payable on the following Tuesday week. Gold left for deferred payment will be payable four weeks after the date when early payment would have been due.

6. The following descriptions of bullion are not admissible within the Mint, viz. :—Articles of plate, jewellery, or wrought gold (coins excepted); bullion containing mercury, or metals foreign to the gold producing districts of Australasia, and destructive to the malleability of the bullion; bullion that has been tampered with in any way.

7. Bullion which can be recognized before melting, as objectionable on the above grounds, will not be received; but should any, after melting, prove unfit for coinage, for the reasons enumerated, it will be returned to the importer, subject to a charge of sixpence per ounce on the gross weight.

8. A reduction of the above Mint charges, to the amount of threepence per ounce standard, will be made in respect to gold, the produce of any other country, imported to the Mint, for early payment, under the conditions prescribed in the second clause of the Act, 26 Vic., No. 5, granting a duty on gold.

Ecclesiastical Lists.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson was the first Chaplain that arrived in the colony. In March, 1794, he was joined by the Rev. Samuel Marsden, long remembered and celebrated for a lifetime of evangelistic spirit and missionary labour, both here and in New Zealand, to which he undertook no less than seven voyages. Shortly after the arrival of Mr. Marsden, the senior chaplain, Mr. Johnson, returned to England, so that for a long time he laboured here alone.

The first Archdeacon, Rev. Thomas Hobbs Scott, arrived May 7th, 1825. He was succeeded by the Venerable Archdeacon Broughton, who arrived September 13th, 1829, and who, on the erection of Australia into a See, in 1838, was created Bishop. He died in 1854, when he was succeeded by the Rev. Dr. Barker. In 1841, Bishopricks were erected in New Zealand; 1842, Tasmania; 1847, Newcastle, Adelaide, Melbourne; 1850, Lyttleton, Western Australia; 1858, Wellington, Nelson; 1859, Queensland; and in 1864, Goulburn.

THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

The first Presbyterian Minister who arrived in the colony was the Rev. Dr. Lang, who preached his first sermon June 8th, 1823. He laboured alone till 1831, when, in consequence of his exertions, five others were added. Since that time till 1840, various others arrived; and the Presbyterian Church having previously existed in a disunited state, it was then united and formed into the Synod of Australia. Two secessions have taken place since, viz., that of Dr. Lang in 1842, and that of the Synod of Eastern Australia, in 1846, the latter of whom separated on Free Church principles.

In November, 1864 an union took place between the Synod of Eastern Australia and the Synod of New South Wales, the new body assuming the name of the Presbyterian Church in New South Wales.

In October, 1865, there was a general union of the Presbyterians, embracing the Synod of Australia in connection with the Church of Scotland, the Presbyterian Church in New South Wales, the United Presbyterian Church, and various other ministers and congregations who had previously occupied isolated and independent positions, the title given to the new body being the "Presbyterian Church of New South Wales."

The General Assembly is appointed to meet in the Presbyterian Church, Phillip Street, Sydney, on Wednesday, the 23rd October, 1867, at seven o'clock p.m.

Moderator of Assembly—Rev. William Purves, Maitland
Clerk of Assembly—The Rev. J. B. Laughton, B.A., Parramatta
Treasurer—Robert Anderson, Australian Club

Educational Establishments.

UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY.

The University of Sydney was incorporated by an Act of the Colonial Legislature, which received the Royal Assent on the 9th December, 1851. It is empowered to confer degrees in Arts, Law, and Physic; and is endowed with an annual income of £5,000.

By a Royal Charter issued 7th February, 1858, the same rank, style, and precedence were granted to graduates of the University of Sydney as are enjoyed by graduates of Universities within the United Kingdom. The University of Sydney is also declared in the amended Charter granted to the University of London, to be one of the institutions in connection with that University, from which certificates of having pursued a due course of instruction shall be received, with a view to admission to degrees.

The Hall is an imposing room in the style of the 15th century. It is 135 feet long, 45 wide, 73 high. The richly carved open roof, is of colonial wood—cedar and iron-bark. The stained glass windows are by Clayton and Bell, of London. At the eastern and western end are two (each of fourteen lights), containing portraits of founders of Colleges in Oxford and Cambridge. The northern bay-window represents all the sovereigns of England, from the Conquest. The side windows (eleven in number), of three lights each, represent in a chronological series, men distinguished in English history for literature or science, from the eighth to the eighteenth century—the first portrait being that of the VENERABLE BEDA, the last, of CAPTAIN COOK. In the northern and southern entrance halls are heraldic windows by the same artists. All the stained glass is the gift of individuals.

There is a valuable Museum of classical and Egyptian antiquities, presented chiefly by Sir Charles Nicholson, Bart. The Library contains several rare and interesting books; amongst them, a copy of the recently discovered Codex Sinaiticus, presented by the Emperor of Russia; and one of the Prince Consort's Speeches, with Her Majesty's autograph on the fly-leaf.

SYDNEY CITY MISSION.

The design of this Society is to promote the extension of Evangelical Religion without reference to denominational distinctions.

To effect this object, Missionaries of approved character and qualifications, who give themselves to the work, are employed and paid by the Institution. Their duty is to visit from house to house in the respective districts that are assigned to them, read the Scriptures, engage in religious conversation, and urge those who are living in the neglect of religion to observe the Sabbath, and to attend public worship; they also, as far as possible, see that all persons possess the Scriptures; distribute approved Religious Tracts, and aid in obtaining Scriptural education for the children of the poor. By the approval of the Committee, they hold meetings for reading, prayer, and expounding the Scriptures; and adopt such other means as the Committee think necessary for the accomplishment of the Mission.

Treasurer—J. H. Goodlet. Secretary—Benjamin Short.

Medical Attendant—Dr. Moffit. Collector—William Day.

SYDNEY DIOCESAN SOCIETY.

Country Directory.

ARRANGED ACCORDING TO THE

POLICE DISTRICTS OF THE COLONY.

Giving a complete statistical view of the Agricultural, Pastoral, Mining, and Industrial state of each; and the moral, and social condition of the inhabitants, as furnished by the Parliamentary Blue Book for 1865. With names of Magistrates, Clerks of Petty Sessions, Registrars, Surveyors, Commissioners for Affidavits, Telegraph Station Masters, Postmasters, Surgeons, Solicitors, Clergymen, Bank Managers, Newspapers, and other valuable information.

Note 1st—The land given as under cultivation may be regarded as either under or in preparation for crops.

2nd—The population is given from the census of 1861, since which it has increased in the country parts, and especially the towns, fully 40 per cent.

3rd—The small figures in parenthesis, after the number of Births, give the number of those illegitimate.

4th—Owing to some contemplated changes in the arrangements of the Quarter Sessions and District Court Sittings for 1867, the sittings for the first quarter of the year only have been fixed.

ALBURY.

This district lies on the right bank of the Murray River, in the pastoral district of Murrumbidgee, embracing the counties of Goulburn, Hume, and part of Selwyn. The scenery is beautiful, the soil very fertile, being adapted for the culture of the vine as well as the growth of cereals. This district is also rich in gold and copper minerals. The climate is salubrious and pleasant, the mean annual temperature last year being 60·4, and the fall of rain 27·65 inches. The gold received by escort from Tumberumba was 2,868 ozs., value £11,188 19s. 8d. The quantity of copper ore raised was 15 tons, value £300. Of the land under cultivation last year 7000 acres were freehold and 1,404 leasehold, producing 58,542 bushels of wheat, 2,122 maize, 1,350 barley, 9,818 oats, 817 tons hay, 104 tons potatoes. There were 231 acres under grape vines, yielding 23,309 gallons wine and 15 tons grapes for table use. Stock—4,180 horses, 48,091 cattle, 184,552 sheep, 1,084 pigs. Mills for grain 2, manufactories, works, &c. 71, public houses 37. The commitments for trial at the Albury Court of Quarter Sessions were 23; convictions 17. The registration returns give—Births 214 (2), marriages 40, deaths 71—of these 10 were in the Hospital. The number admitted into this institution in 1865 was 87, discharged 71, total cost $662 0s. 1d. Population 3,771.

Places of Petty Sessions—Albury, Meragle, Tumberumba, and Corowa.

ALBURY.

This township is situated on the right bank of the Murray, where the river is crossed by the Great Southern Road; it is 351 miles from Sydney, and 200 from Melbourne. Other distances are 140 miles from Deniliquin, 109 from Gundagai, 77 from Wagga Wagga, and 26 from Beechworth. By the course of the Murray it is about 300 miles from its source, and about 1,800 from its debouchure in Lake Alexandria; the respective travelling distances being 140 and 700. Albury is 572 feet above the sea level. The Murray has been navigated as far as Albury by steamers. Population 981.

BALRANALD.

This District extends from the confluence of Talla Creek with the Murray River on the west, to the confluence of the Murrumbidgee with that River, and along the Wakool to its confluence with the Edward River on the east, thence by the northern boundary of the Deniliquin Districts to the western boundary of the Wagga Wagga District, thence northerly across the Murrumbidgee and the Lachlan Rivers for 112 miles, from the latter to the boundary of the Darling and Albert Districts. This is at present a purely pastoral District, abounding with salt vegetables, which render it so well adapted for grazing purposes. The country in the neighbourhood of the confluence of the great Rivers here mentioned, is adapted for farming operations, which will doubtless be carried on extensively as population increases. All land under cultivation (14 acres) was freehold. There was one acre under grape vines which produced 15 cwt. of grapes. Live stock—1,160 horses, 25,656 cattle, 68,840 sheep, 119 pigs. BOURKE.

This district embraces the eastern portion of the pastoral district of Albert, the western and southern portions of Warrego, and the northern portion of Wellington. Owing to the absence of mountains in these parts of the interior the want of rain is frequently felt severely, which renders them only fit for pastoral purposes, nevertheless, this district, not long since regarded as in the unknown interior, is becoming rapidly populated and the resources developed to such an extent as to lead to the conclusion that a large and flourishing population will, ere long, find happy homes on the banks of the Darling. Owing to its distance from the settled parts the population consists chiefly of adult males. Registration—births, 31; marriages, 10; deaths, 40. Public houses, 7. Other statistics, no return.

Place of Petty Sessions—Bourke.

GRAFTON.

Lies on the Clarence River, and on the coast between the point opposite the Solitary Islands and the range dividing the waters of the Clarence and Richmond Rivers. Besides being a fine pastoral country, it is admirably adapted for agricultural pursuits, and the cultivation of some of the staple productions of tropical climates. It is rich in minerals. Gold has been found in considerable quantities. The same may be said of copper and coal which is of good quality. The climate is perhaps the most humid in New South Wales. At Casino, on the Richmond River, 55 miles inland from Grafton, the mean shade temperature for 1862 was $68^{\circ} 5'$, the mean maximum $81^{\circ} 9'$, and the mean minimum $55^{\circ} 2'$, and the depth of rain 55.41 inches. It is to be regretted, for the sake of science, that the meteorological observations in these districts have been discontinued. Of the land under cultivation last year, 8,076 acres were freehold and 4,157 leasehold. Produce—11,286 bushels wheat, 462,596 maize, 320 barley, 90 oats, 92 tons potatoes, and 1,300 lbs. tobacco. 19 acres were under grape vines, producing 3,340 gallons wine. THE NECROPOLIS, HASLEM'S CREEK.

On the 1st January, 1867, an Act, passed during the last session of Parliament, prohibiting future burials within the City of Sydney,—except in cases where there is an exclusive right of interment in any vault or inclosure,—came into operation, and the same day the new cemetery at Haslem's Creek was opened for the purpose of burial.

Ever since the year 1856, the necessity of providing a new public cemetery at some distance from the city has been the subject of general comment and of official correspondence. After many preliminary enquiries, the Government, in September, 1860, notified, in the Gazette, their readiness to purchase "not less than 100 acres of land suitable for a general cemetery, on or near the Great Southern Railway between Sydney and Parramatta." Within a few weeks several offers were made; and during the year 1861 other portions of land were offered. On the 28th March 1862, the Secretary for Lands, Mr. John Robertson, agreed with Mr. Cohen for the purchase of 200 acres of land between Homebush and Haslem's Creek, and about ten miles from Sydney, at £10 an acre. The title having been made out to the satisfaction of the Government, the purchase money, £2,000, was paid on the 15th August 1862, and the land was thereupon conveyed by Messrs. Edward Cohen and David Benjamin to the Crown. The land was shortly afterwards fenced in; and more recently has been cleared and divided into portions for the use of different denominations. All preliminary arrangements for the use of the cemetery were completed shortly before the end of 1866.

On the first day of 1867 the Rev. A. B. Davis and the Rev. S. Phillips, accompanied by a number of their co-religionists of the Hebrew race, consecrated the portion of ground allotted to the Jews; and the Rev. A. B. Davis delivered an eloquent and appropriate oration, pointing out the harmony between the modern improved method of burying the dead at a distance from the abodes of the living and the ancient Mosaic rule on this subject. Some of the larger denominations have shewn less readiness than the Jews to avail themselves of the new cemetery. But the objections started on the ground of distance, inconvenience, and so forth, have been to a great extent obviated; and there can be no doubt that the arrangement by which the resting place of the dead is removed from the vicinity of the homes of the living will meet with general and permanent approval.

The following are the portions allotted to various sections of the community, and the names of the trustees appointed on behalf of each:—

A. R. P.		Trustees.
58	2 3	for the General Cemetery G. Thornton and T. Spence.
52	3 3	for the Church of England .. Not yet appointed.
39	1 13	for the Roman Catholics .. { His Grace Archbishop Polding Very Rev. S. J. A. Sheehy T. C. Makinson, Esq.
12	0 0	for the Presbyterians { S. D. Gordon, M.L.C., G. Brown, J. Frazer, J. H. Goodlet, and R. T. Moodie.
6	3 5	for the Wesleyans { J. Caldwell, T. Cowlishaw L. Moore, M. Blanchard, and J. Gollidge
4	0 0	for the Congregationalists.. { S. Thompson, J. Fairfax, P. S. Jones, R. P. Richardson, J. Row, and J. Mullens
2	0 0	for the Jews { A. Cohen, S. Samuel, and S. A. Joseph
8	0 0	reserved for sites for mortuary chapels.

The following regulations and scale of charges have been issued by the authority of the Government:—

FUNERAL TRAINS

Will leave Sydney at 8.30 a.m. and 4.15 p.m. daily, for Haslem Creek Cemetery.

Rates—Corpse, free; friends, each, 1s. return journey.

Note—Paupers: Corpse and friends free.

Special Trains—Corpse, 10s.; friends, each, 3s. for return journey

Regulations—1. Notices of intended funerals must be given at the office of the funeral conductor, Redfern Station, each day, before 8 o'clock a.m., and not later than 6 o'clock p.m.

2. Trains will stop at intermediate stations, if notice is given to the conductor before the departure of the train from Sydney Station.

3. Arrangements for special trains can be made for such times only as will not interfere with the ordinary traffic.

The charges for interment and for the erection of tombstones and vaults are to be fixed by the trustees, subject to the approval of the Executive Council. These charges will supply the funds out of which will be defrayed the expenses incurred in the maintenance of the cemetery in a proper state, and the salaries of those who are engaged in the discharge of duties connected with the interments.

The Government having cleared the ground, and laid out the general plan, several of the denominations are taking measures for securing appropriate ornamentation, by planting trees and shrubs and forming walks; so that the cemetery will, before many years, bear such an aspect as accords with the dictates of affectionate remembrance towards the remains of departed friends and kindred.

Tasmania.

The Island of Tasmania lies between $14^{\circ} 20'$ and $43^{\circ} 40'$ S. lat., and $144^{\circ} 40'$ and $148^{\circ} 20'$ E. long., and contains 15,232,000 acres of land.

The first discovery was by the Dutch Navigator, Abel Jansen Tasman, on the 1st December, 1642, who gave it the name of Van Diemen's Land, in honor of the Governor of the East Indies; but the name of Tasmania, in honor of the discoverer, is officially used. Captain Cook visited the Island on the 25th of January, 1777. Bass made the discovery in 1798, that Tasmania was an island, and called the Straits separating it from Victoria after himself. It was in 1804 under Colonel Collins, the first attempts at forming a settlement on its shores were made. The physical aspect of the country is mountainous. It abounds in rivers and lakes, three of the former being navigable for vessels for 40 miles from their mouth. On the principal one, the Derwent, is situated the capital. Many of the mountains are of a great height, that of Cradle Mountain is 5099 feet above the level of the sea, and Valentine's Peak, 3637 feet, is visible at a distance of 60 miles. The capital is Hobart Town, and the principal other town is Launceston.

South Australia.

The boundaries of this colony are fixed between 132° and 141° E. long. for the eastern and western boundaries; the 26° of S. lat. for the northern; and on the south by the Southern Ocean. The coast line extends 1,600 miles, embracing an area of about 300,000 square miles. It was founded on the Wakefield principle, and for some time seemed to disappoint the expectation of its projectors. It has however, after passing through many vicissitudes, attained an important position among the Australian colonies. Captain Hindmarsh, the first Governor, arrived at the close of 1836, and the colony was proclaimed on the 28th December of that same year. He was succeeded by Colonel Gawler, who arrived on the 12th October, 1838. Captain Grey, the third Governor, arrived 10th May, 1841, and his successor, Major Robe, 14th October, 1845. Sir Henry Young, the next Governor, arrived on 1st August, 1848, and Sir Richard Graves Macdonnell, on 7th June, 1858. The present Governor, Sir Dominick Daly, landed and assumed office on the 4th March, 1862. Since it was founded, it has steadily progressed in population, value, and importance to the present time, while the navigation of the Murray tends still further to advance its prosperity.

The capital of South Australia is Adelaide, and the principal other towns are Gawler Town, Kapunda, Koorunga, Kadina, Moonta, Wallaroo.

Victoria.

This colony is situate in the south-eastern part of Australia; between lat. 34° and 39° S.; and long. 141° and 150° East; bounded N.E. and N. by New South Wales, W. by South Australia, and S. by Bass' Straits. Until 1850 it was known as the Port Phillip District, forming the southern portion of New South Wales, and was erected into a separate colony on the 13th January, 1851. The discovery of Gold has drawn to this colony an enormous multitude of emigrants; so much so, that it has developed its natural resources to an extent altogether unparalleled. It contains within its area 86,831 square miles, or 55,571,840 acres, and the length of the sea coast is about 600 miles.

The Capital of Victoria is Melbourne. The other principal towns are Geelong, Ballarat, Bendigo (Sandhurst), Castlemaine, Echuca, Belfast, Portland, Beechworth.

Queensland.

This colony, which is the youngest of the Australian Colonies, comprises the north eastern portion of Australia. Its Southern boundaries commencing at Point Danger in lat. 28° 8' S. follow a somewhat winding course to a point on the 29th parallel, where the McIntyre River intersects; thence along the parallel to the 141st Meridian, the eastern boundary of South Australia. On the north it is bounded by Torres' Straits, and on the east by the Pacific Ocean. This colony formed a portion of New South Wales until the year 1859, and was known as the Moreton Bay District. It was proclaimed a separate colony on the 3rd of June, 1859, and Sir George Ferguson Bowen appointed its first Governor. In November 1859, Sir George Bowen arrived at Brisbane, and the separation of the colony from New South Wales was formally proclaimed on the first of December in New South Wales, and on the 10th of the same month at Brisbane. The Capital of Queensland is Brisbane, and the principal other towns are Ipswich, Toowoomba, Drayton, Warwick, Dalby, Gayndah, Maryborough, Rockhampton, Gladstone, Roma.

New Zealand.

This colony consists of three Islands, called New Ulster, New Munster, and New Leinster, or Northern, Middle, and Southern Islands, lying between 34 deg. and 47 deg. lat. S. and 166 deg. and 179 long. E. The colony is divided into nine provinces, viz.,—Auckland, Wellington, New Plymouth, or Taranaki, Nelson, Otago, Canterbury, Hawkes Bay, Southland, and Marlborough. Each province is governed by a Provincial Council, and an elected superintendent.

The North Island is 500 miles long, and of very irregular shape, varying in breadth from 5 to 300 miles, and contains about 31,174,400 acres. The Middle Island is 550 miles long, with an average breadth of 110 miles, and contains about 46,126,080 acres. The Southern Island is triangular in shape, measuring about 30 miles on each side, and contains about 1,000,000 acres. Total area of the three Islands, 101,500 square miles. The coast line of the whole group is 3120 miles in length, of which about one half belong to the North Island. The capital of New Zealand is Wellington, which has recently been selected as the future seat of the General Government. Each of the other provinces has its own capital.

The Legislature, called the General Assembly, is composed of the Governor, a Legislative Council of not less than 20 Membs, appointed by the Crown for life, and a House of Representatives of 70 Members, elected for five years.

ART-UNION OF LONDON. 1867.

Every Subscriber of One Guinea will receive (besides a CHANCE of a PRIZE at the Annual Distribution in April)

An Impression of an interesting and important Plate,

PITY,

Engraved by H. LEMON from the original Picture by
H. LE JEUNE, A.R.A.

The Prizes include

The RIGHT to SELECT a Valuable WORK of ART from one of the Public Exhibitions;

STATUETTES IN PORCELAIN;

A WOOD-NYPH,

Reduced from the Original by C. B. BIRCH,

Which gained the Premium of £800 given by this Society in 1864;

MEDALLION INKSTANDS IN BRONZE;

And other Works, all produced exclusively for the Society.

An Artist's Proof of the Plate may be had for FIVE GUINEAS, with Five Chances in the Distribution; or a Lettered Proof on India, with Two Chances, for TWO GUINEAS.

THE ART-UNION OF LONDON

Was established to promote the knowledge and love of the Fine Arts, and their general advancement in the British Empire, by a wide diffusion of the works of native artists; and to elevate Art and encourage its professors, by creating an increased demand for their works, and an improved taste on the part of the public. It is under the direction of a Council of the Members, whose services are honorary. and four of whom retire from office every year.

EVERY MEMBER for EACH GUINEA subscribed, is entitled to—

I. One Chance in the Distribution of Prizes at the Annual Meeting on the last Tuesday in April each year.

II. An Impression of one or more Plates produced exclusively for the Society; admission for himself and friends to the General Meeting and to the Exhibition of Prizes; and the Annual Report, with List of Members, and Almanac.

EXTRA CHANCES.—Any Member having paid his subscription for the current year, and wishing to have one or more extra chances in the next Distribution of Prizes—but without another Print—may have one such extra chance for every HALF-GUINEA subscribed for that purpose, for which a separate printed receipt will be given.

WORKS OF ART IN LIEU OF PRINTS.—A Bust, Statuette, or Tassa may be had instead of the Print, by additional payment, if special notice be given at the time of subscribing. Payments in different years cannot be combined with a view to obtain one of these works.

PAYMENT IN ADVANCE.—A subscription for ten years in advance, entitles to a Porcelain Bust, or a Tassa in iron, or one of the Medals executed for the Society in silver; in addition to the annual advantages attached to the subscription.

TEN GUINEA PRIZE.—Any Member who has subscribed TEN GUINEAS in SUCCESSIVE YEARS, ending with the current year, without gaining a prize of any kind in that period, shall be entitled to one of the Porcelain Busts as a special prize. (An accidental omission of payment may be supplied by paying two guineas for two chances in the next succeeding year.)

JOHN L. SHERRIFF, Hon. Sec., Sydney.

THE ART-UNION OF GLASGOW,

1866-67.

THE OBJECT OF THE ART-UNION OF GLASGOW
Is to aid in extending a knowledge of the FINE ARTS by distributing among its Members MERITORIOUS WORKS OF ART.

A subscription of One Guinea constitutes Membership for One Year. The whole subscriptions, after deducting the necessary working expenses, are devoted to the purchase of PAINTINGS, DRAWINGS, SCULPTURES, ENGRAVINGS, and other Works of Art. The following privileges are offered to Members for the Year 1866-67.

FOR EACH SUBSCRIPTION OF ONE GUINEA

I.—A SERIES OF TWELVE ETCHINGS from Paintings by the late DAVID SCOTT, Esq., R.S.A., accompanied with descriptive letterpress, viz:—

- 1.—Vignette Head of the Artist, David Scott, Esq., R.S.A.
- 2.—"Peter the Hermit Preaching the Crusades."
- 3.—"Hope appearing to the Afflicted."
- 4.—"The Alchymical Adept Lecturing on the Elixir Vitæ."
- 5.—"Robert the Bruce watching for the Signal Light."
- 6.—"Queen Elizabeth Viewing the Performance of the Merry Wives of Windsor at the Globe Theatre."
- 7.—"Achilles Addressing the Manes of Patroclus."
- 8.—"Mary Queen of Scots at the place of her Execution."
- 9.—"The Triumph of Love."
- 10.—"Drake on the Quarter-deck—the Destruction of the Armada."
- 11.—"Richard the Third and the Princes."
- 12.—"Oberon listening to the Mermaid's Song."

II.—ONE SHARE IN THE BALLOT FOR PRIZES at the annual Drawing, which will take place in March. The Prizes consisting of:—

FIRST.—Sums set apart for the purchase of Paintings or Sculpture, each Prizeholder having the right to select the Work of Art to form his prize from any Public Exhibition.

SECOND.—Prizes, consisting of Paintings, Engravings, and other Works of Art, selected by the Committee.

Subscribers of Two Shares will be entitled to Proof Copies of the Etchings.

In lieu of the Etchings, Subscribers may, if preferred, select their Presentation Work from the Engravings, Photographs, or Chromo-Lithographs of previous years.

Subscriptions received by

CRYSTAL PALACE ART UNION.

For each Guinea subscribed, the member has the right of selecting a Presentation Work from a series of Art Manufactures of varied designs and great excellence, in addition to one chance in the Prize Distribution.

These Works include examples from the following eminent artists:—John Gibson, R.A., W. Calder Marshall, R.A., O. Stanfield, R.A., David Roberts, R.A., Raffaele Monti, Joseph Durham, Felix Miller, P. Delamotte, &c.; and their execution is guaranteed by the names of the following heads of firms, to whom it has been entrusted:—Messrs Copeland, Minton, Elkington, Wedgwood, Bates, Battam, Hanhart, Negretti and Zambra, &c.

The opinions of the Press justify the assertion that

Each Presentation Work

IS OF THE FULL VALUE OF THE SUBSCRIPTION.

Every Subscriber of One Guinea has one chance in the Prize Distribution, in addition to the choice of a Presentation Work of the full value of the Subscription; but early Subscription is recommended, to avoid delay in the production of the required number of copies of each work.

ROYAL Fire and Life Insurance COMPANY.

CAPITAL - - £2,000,000.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

THE Premiums in this Department during the past year reached the sum of £414,733, being an increase of £9,000 over the business of the previous one. The total increase of the last five years is upwards of £146,000; an advance of revenue probably without parallel in magnitude in so short a period, excepting where two or more Companies have occasionally amalgamated their respective businesses into one.

The remarkable increase of the company's business in the United Kingdom, as marked by the unerring test of Parliamentary Returns of Duty shows most incontestably that no Insurance Office has even distinctly approached the ratio of advance which has been accorded by the confidence of the public to this Company.

The prompt payment of losses during the past year, which have been on a large scale, has shown the character this Company has always maintained throughout the whole world for the stability of its operations. It will only be necessary to add here, that the Agents can with confidence announce to their fellow citizens that they may feel assured every legitimate claim will be immediately settled.

Rates of Premium.

Class 1.—Brick or stone Buildings—slated, metal, or shingled roofs—occupied as Dwelling or Counting Houses only, from 3s. to 6s. 6d. per cent. per annum.

Class 2.—Brick or Stone Buildings—slated, metal, or shingled roofs—occupied for storage of Merchandize, or for purposes of trade, from 4s. 6d. to 11s. 6d. per cent. per annum.

Class 3.—Wooden Buildings, with shingled roofs, from 15s. to 25s. per cent. per annum.

LOSSES adjusted and paid in Sydney.

SURVEYOR, J. J. DAVEY, Esq.

Life Department.

During the past year no less a sum than £886,663 7s. 8d. was insured on New Policies issued. The Annual Premiums in this Department now reaching upwards of £165,000.

The important advantages afforded by the Company in this Branch will include the following, viz :—

GUARANTEE OF AN AMPLE CAPITAL,

MODERATE PREMIUMS,

Large Participation of Profits by the Assured,

AMOUNTING TO

TWO-THIRDS OF NETT AMOUNT,

Small Charge for Management, the expense at the Office being borne in due proportion by the two Branches, and Exemption of the Assured from the Liability of Partnership.

---

At the last Quinquennial Meeting of this Company in August, 1865, a Bonus was again declared to the Policy-holders (insured with Profits) equivalent to Two per cent. on the amount of their Policies for each year they have been current, a continuation of success (we believe) never exceeded by any other Life Office.

---

English Rates of Premium Charged.

The further tables, shewing the half-yearly rates, with profits, and the various modes of effecting assurances and endowments, can be obtained at any of the Offices or Agencies of the Company.

Money advances are granted on Policies; interest at the rate of 6 per cent.

The participating branch is managed for a fixed charge of 10 per cent., the whole of the profits going to assurers; and the Company give the guarantee of their Capital (£2,000,000), and the unlimited liability of nearly 1,000 shareholders. This system is unequalled for liberality by that of any other Company in Australia, and at less expense for management; gives all the advantages afforded by Mutual Societies without the attendant personal liability of the assurers, and the uncertainty of the provision made for their families.

The Maitland Ensign:

AN

Politics, Literature and Commerce.

THE Ensign is published, every Wednesday and Saturday in the populous and flourishing town of West Maitland. It has been in existence for upwards of six years and is widely circulated in the northern parts of the colony of New South Wales, and particularly among the settlers on the Hunter. Owing to the decided views it has always expressed on all questions, it is well known as a political journal through the most of Australia.
